Test of Utilities' 'Death Sentence' Is Forced by U.S.

Files Action to Compel Electric Bond and Share to Sign.

Securities Board Stakes All on Suit

Company Replies With Formation of New Organization.

By Robert C. Albright.

Moving independently for its own court trial of utility law validity, the Government yesterday picked the Electric Bond & Share Co. and its five intermediate holding company subsidiaries for the test, bringing suit in the Southern District Federal Court of New York.

Unexpected action was taken four days in advance of the final date set for holding company registration, in a complaint by the Securities and Exchange Commission that Electric Bond & Share was violating or about to violate provisions of the act. The court was urged to compel the company to register.

The suit was filed in the face of wholesale requests by utility holding companies for court injunctions protecting them from requirements of the law. The latest was filed in Washington yesterday by the far-flung North American Co., which asked the District Supreme Court to declare the law and its "death sentence" provisions, null and void in their entirety.

E. B. & S. Has New Firm.

Shortly after it was named in the Government's complaint, the Electric Bond & Share Co. announced it had acted to dissolve interlocking relationships with its holding and operating companies, according to Associated Press dispatches from New York.

After the suit was brought, the company had announced it would not register. Later last night it said a new company had been created to be owned completely by Electric Bond & Share and to be known as the Ebasco Services, Inc. The five subsidiary companies, according to the announcement, now are to be separtely officered and staffed with no officer or director of E. B. & S. an officer or director of any of these holding or operating companies, or vice versa.

Ebasco Services, Inc., will take over all of Electric Bond & Share's service contracts with its operating utilities in this country and abroad, supplying them counsel on financial, technical and economic matters, said the announcement.

Aims Outlined.

"The advantages sought by the company with creation of a subsidiary to render these services," read the E. B. & S. statement, "include qualification of such a service company to do business in the various States in which its clients operate, and in making more readily available to regulatory authority all facts in connection with the functioning of said service organization.

This development apparently came as a surprise to the Securities and Exchange Commission, which was not prepared to comment on it last night.

The new Ebasco Services, Inc., apparently will take over many of the functions which the Government in its bill of complaint argued Electric Bond & Share would wrongfully exercise if it did not register. Charging more than 100 actions that should not be undertaken without registration, the SEC complaint had enumerated among them interlocking directorates, which would be abolished by the New E. B. & S. setup announced last night.

But officials were unable to say authoritatively what effect the development might have on the Government suit, or whether the new Ebasco company would come within utility act provisions.

Government prosecution of the Electric Bond & Share holding group was begun as the Security and Exchange Commission expanded its legal staff for the coming utilities fray by naming Robert H. Jackson, assistant general counsel

Protests Olympiad

ERNEST LEE JAHNCKE.

Keep America From Olympics, Jahncke Urges

U. S. Games Official Asserts Nazis Flaunted Pledge to Admit Jews.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 26.—Agitation against American participation in the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin received considerable impetus today when Ernest Lee Jahncke, one of three American members of the international Olympic committee, said he would do "all I can to persuade my fellow Americans that they ought not take part" in the games "if they are held in Nazi Germany."

Jahncke lined up with the opposition led by Jeremiah T. Mahoney, president of the Amateur Athletic Union, in letters to Count Henri Baillet-Latour, president of the international Olympic committee, and Dr. Theodor Lewald, chairman of the German Olympic organizing committee.

Nazi Pledges Renewed.

The stand of the former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who has served on the international committee since 1927, is diametrically opposed to the attitude of one of his colleagues, Brig. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill. Sherrill recently returned from Germany and declared Germany is living up to Olympic regulations with regard to non-discrimination of race, religion, color and creed.

Coincidental with Jahncke's announcement, Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the American Olympic committee, said he had received renewed assurances that Germany will strictly adhere to her Olympic pledges.

Count Baillett-Latour, in a letter, said "the interview I had with the Chancellor of Germany as well as the inquiry which I made, have convinced me that there is nothing that interferes with holding the games of the eleventh Olympiad at Berlin and at Garmisch-Partenkirchen. The terms required by the Olympic charter have been kept by the German Olympic committee."

"It will be a calamity, in my opinion," Jahncke wrote to Dr. Lewald, "if America does participate, for it now appears as if the Olympic idea can be saved only by the refusal of Americans and of other peoples to have anything to do with the games if they are held in Germany.

Tear Proposes Detector Test All Suspects

Would Submit Himself Hoping Others Take Similar Action.

Seeks to Make Good on Vow to 'Track Down' Slayer.

The sweetheart of the slain Corinna Loring has volunteered to undergo a "lie detector" test to prove his innocence of the murder of the bride-to-be.

"I know that I am the No. 1 suspect in the case," said Richard Tear, the 29-year-old hospital attendant, whose bride-to-be was snatched from him by murder.

"I owe it to Corinna's memory, to my own name, and to my family to subject myself to any test which may prove my innocence," he emphasized.

The former Marine yesterday suggested to Lieut. Joseph Itzel, ace Baltimore detective in charge of the investigation, that he be subjected to the "lie detector" examination.

Hopes Others Follow.

"Not only do I wish to undergo the test, but it is my hope that every suspect and every witness in the case will submit to the same examination," Tear said. "In that way we may finally find the person who killed my girl."

As he talked, Tear showed the effects of the nervous strain to which he has been subjected since the night of November 4, when the 26-year-old public stenographer disappeared from her home at 3110 Beech street, Mount Rainier.

He was nervous, but that tension was mingled with a grim determination to make good his boast that "he would track down the murderer." He went on:

"I know from the papers in the past few days that suspicion is being fixed on me. I also know another thing, and that is, that I didn't kill Corinna and I am going to find out who did kill her."

Would Borrow Funds.

If necessary, Tear said, he would borrow money to pay for the "lie-detector" tests. He wants to undergo the test and will go to any extreme to fulfill his wish, he said.

When told that a nationally recognized criminologist, whose expert testimony has been received in the Federal courts and more than a score of States, had pronounced the lie-detector test infallible, Tear said: "That's just what I want."

Tear spent three hours last night in gathering data on the locations of "lie-detector" devices. He learned that there is one owned by the Rhode Island State police, there is one in the Scientific Crime Detection Laboratories in Chicago, and there is one in the police school of August Vollmer in Berkeley, Calif.

The "lie detector" test has been the subject of study by criminologists for nearly two score years. Until a few years ago, the courts refused to permit the introduction of the conclusions of such tests in criminal trials.

Courts Change View.

But in the last year or two, the courts in some States have permitted this type of evidence, where the subject of the test volutnarily submitted. Criminologists now believe that the "lie detector" is now past the experimental stage and is ready for general acceptance in criminal courts, just as ballistics testimony is now received.

In his offer to submit to the test, Tear made only one reservation, and that is that the lie detector machine be in charge of competent technicians of recognized ability.

The machine which is used in "lie detection" fundamentally is the same as the rubberized cloth which a physician straps around a patient's arm to measure blood pressure. The device is technically known as a polygraph.

Instead of a dial attachment, the lie detector has an ink indicator, which traces the patient's blood pressure on a reel of paper.

The suspect sits with the rubberized cloth around his arm, and is questioned. If he tells a lie, his blood pressure rises rapidly and then subsides.

The reason for the rise in blood pressure when a lie is told, the advocates of this test say, is because there are changes which take place

Edith Maxwell Fund Indorsed by Women; Hill People Resentful

Virginia Civic Leaders Indignant at 'Unfair' Conviction.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Nov. 26.—The 1,500 inhabitants of this dingy little mountain town are still trying to figure out why the Edith Maxwell case should arouse any interest outside the county.

Letters from all over the country—"pert near 50 a day," according to one of the jailer's helpers—are pouring in to the 21-year-old school teacher who was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary for striking her drunken father with a slipper when he threatened her with a butcher knife one midnight last July.

The jury said Edith murdered her father. Edith said she struck in defense, and, besides, her father killed himself when he hit his head on something sharp as he fell.

Whether it was the spike heel of Edith's slipper or "the something sharp" that put an end to Trigg Maxwell, his daughter is behind the bars of the old red brick jail here. Unless her lawyers arrange for a new trial before December 10 she will be bundled off to the penitentiary as soon as the present term of court is over.

"I hear people all over the country are getting worked up about it," said one of the courthouse hangers-on this afternoon. "Well,

Virginia's women civic leaders, indignant over the conviction of Edith Maxwell, mountain girl, for the murder of her father at Wise, Va., yesterday supported The Washington Post's campaign for a defense fund.

These women believe the 25-year prison sentence cruel and unjust. They commended The Post's drive for funds to secure the best counsel to handle the girl's appeal.

"The sentence was a cruel decision when the girl was protecting herself," said Mrs. Thomas S. Wallis, regent of the Francis Wallis Chapter, D. A. R. "It was very harsh and very wrong. It was a decision of the moral code of the Virginia mountains rather than a decision of justice."

"There should be a change of venue," said Mrs. Dorothy Dunn, chairman of the legislative committee of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Arlington County. "The passions of those mountain folk have been whipped to such a fury that the girl could not expect anything but prejudice from them. I think it is a marvelous thing for The Post to try to get justice for her."

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Norfolk yesterday dispatched a letter to Miss Eliza-

A. F. L. Breach Grows as Lewis Ignores Green

Chief of Mine Workers Disregards Warnings, Speeds Activities.

By Felix Bruner.

Disregarding the warning of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, against continuing with an opposition group within the federation, the committee for industrial organization yesterday began a Nation-wide campaign for organization of industrial unions.

In a move that may change the future course of the entire labor movement, the committee, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the powerful United Mine Workers of America, turned its attention to organization of workers in the automobile, aluminum, radio and other mass-production industries.

Because the federation is persisting in its policy of organization by crafts rather than by industries, the Lewis committee, by its latest action, widened its breach with the federation. At the same time, however, it expressed the hope that proposed new unions be brought "under the banner" of the A. F. of L.

The letter announcing its plan was sent by the committee for industrial organization to all central labor bodies, State federations, Federal labor unions and international unions in the United States. Accompanying the letter were copies of a minority committee report rejected at the recent A. F. of L. convention, and of speeches made at the convention by Lewis and Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union and a member of the committee headed by Lewis.

"Because of the urgency of organizing the unorganized in the basic industries of America, the committee for industrial organiza-

Brazil Crushes Revolt; 90 Slain In Pernambuco

Natal Still in 'Communist' Hands, But Recapture Soon Is Forecast.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 26.—The Brazilian government tonight hurled land, sea and air forces against "Communists" revolting in the northern states of Rio Grande do Norte and Pernambuco.

The insurrection in Pernambuco was shattered, the war office said.

The red flag still fluttered over the important northern city of Natal, but authorities predicted victory there shortly. The civilian population was said to be co-operating with the army to crush the followers of Louis Carlos Prestes, Communist firebrand.

The rebel movement in the suburbs of the City of Pernambuco was turned into rout by artillery. After a night of bitter fighting in which 90 reportedly were killed in the outskirts of the populous seaport, the rebels fled from their barricades in Socorro across the Caqiberibe River.

The scattered remnants remobilized in the town of Jabotao and endeavored to make a last stand. But federal authorities struck before they could reorganize and the rebels again were compelled to flee in complete disorder. They left many prisoners, machine guns and rifles in Jabotao.

Meantime police captured 80 suspects, remnants of the insurrectionists in Pernambuco.

Tension in the capital lessened with reports from the north indicating the civilian population and local garrisons for the most part were loyal. The uprising at Natal was led by noncommissioned officers of the garrison, who seized the state and local governments, turned out officials and barricaded themselves under the red emblem of communism.

Authorities were on the alert

Italy Censors News in Fight On Sanctions

Data on Trade Veiled By War-Time Action Against League.

Britain Reported Ready to Call Rome's 'Bluff' On Oil Embargo.

The War Situation.

War-time measures were applied in Italy to combat sanctions.

Britain, worried over United States reaction to postponement of League of Nations action on oil embargo, was reported ready "to call Mussolini's bluff" and force action on the boycott.

Emperor Haile Selassie received reports that Ethiopian forces in the South have hurled Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's armies back to the line held at the outbreak of hostilities.

Reports that an Ethiopian force was routed on the southern front, leave at least 100 dead, were made public in Rome.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 26.—Besieged economically by 52 nations, Italy applied war-time measures tonight to combat sanctions.

Military silence fell on those who might give "information useful to the enemy."

Premier Mussolini suspended publication of statistics that might show the League of Nations powers where to put on the pressure to block most effectively Italy's war in Ethiopia.

The Bank of Italy, for the first time in history, refused to publish a statement showing its gold reserves.

Gold was being contributed in great quantities by Italy's population, but no one expected it to balance the recent outflow, which for six months had averaged 20 tons a month.

So much gold, silver, copper and iron had been brought to the government that leading Fascists called the movement a plebiscite in which the country expressed its approval of Il Duce's moves in Africa and his stand against sanctions.

Several priests expressed their approval of the government's position.

Britain May "Call Bluff."

London, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Britain is preparing to "call Mussolini's bluff" and declare an embargo on oil shipments to Italy, diplomats believed tonight.

The cabinet defense committee held an unexpected meeting at No. 10 Downing street, reportedly to consider the Empire's defense in case oil sanctions should lead to war with Italy.

At the same time the government announced that despite postponement of the League Committee of Eighteen's meeting to start the oil embargo, Britain remains in favor of collective enforcement of such a penalty against Italy in a futile effort to halt her war machine in Ethiopia.

Representatives of the dominions attended the defense meeting, which lasted nearly two hours. Hints from Rome that an oil embargo would be considered a military measure were understood to have prompted the meeting.

Some quarters believed the Italian hint was a bluff intended to frighten Britain and inspire caution in France.

Resentment Cited.

Reports from Washington that the United States felt resentment at being "left out on a limb" by its discouragement to oil exporters when the League postponed oil action evidently inspired the government statement of policy.

Replying to questions by correspondents, the government spokesman asserted: "Nobody is running away from oil sanctions." He added that the United States action had "simplified the League's position."

The British cabinet is expected to decide tomorrow how long a delay will be allowed before pressure is exerted for the oil ban.

Geneva, Nov. 26 (AP).—League of Nations officials said today that the meeting to discuss the imposition of an oil embargo against Italy probably would be December 6 or 9.

Laval Warns Poll Tomorrow Fixes Future of Franc

PREMIER LAVAL.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 26.—Premier Laval, in a radio appeal to the nation, warned it tonight that "the destiny of the franc is at stake" Thursday, when parliament returns to support or overthrow his government.

Earlier, Laval attempted to save his cabinet by accepting proposals designed to disband political troops such as the Nationalist Croix de Feu.

Saying he had chopped the 1936 budget down 16½ per cent by his decree laws, the premier cited gold losses of the Bank of France and warned: "Anxiety has reappeared and the uncertainty, if it is prolonged, would threaten to be fatal to our finance.

"We must have a rapid vote. We shall ask parliament to decide quickly. If not, the situation will speedily grow worse."

Laval said if existing regulations were not sufficient to halt recent political disorders "we will extend them by imposing respect for the law upon all parties."

Cites Early Agreement.

As foreign minister, Laval said Great Britain and France were agreed "from the beginning" in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict to avoid all "military sanctions and any measures likely to lead to a naval blockade. Thus the closing of the Suez Canal was never considered."

He insisted that the Franco-Soviet pact is "directed against no country. We shall turn our back upon none of our friendships and will respect all engagements.

"We hope sincerely to establish and develop a relationship as a good neighbor with Germany. A France strong, vigilant and pacific, has nothing to fear."

Leaders of the Croix de Feu, a growing organization of World War veterans, announced they were "waiting to see what happens" when the government goes before the Chamber of Deputies Thursday. Friends of Francois de la Rocque, Croix de Feu leader, said attempts at dissolution might lead "to civil war."

Wants France Vote.

Laval, with an appeal to "patriotism," is insisting upon a vote of confidence first on his financial policy and decree laws intended to keep the budget balanced. The cabinet is regarded as safer on this issue, since its enemies fear they would be held responsible in case an unbalanced budget brought devaluation.

Edouard Herriot appealed to his Radical Socialist followers to support Laval and there were indications a crisis might be averted.

The government announced its acceptance of a report by Georges Chauvin, Radical Socialist deputy, calling for the disbanding of "seditious" or semimilitary organizations.

The cabinet also indicated its readiness to support legislation giving prefects power to forbid private as well as public meetings, which would be aimed at Croix de Feu "mobilizations."

These questions will be taken up after the Chamber disposes of an interpellation upon the financial policy.

U. S. Weighing War Trade Ban On Quota Basis

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Determined to pursue its neutrality policy as outlined by the President and Secretary of State, irrespective of what other nations may do, this Government as a further step is considering limiting exports of essential war material, such as oil, copper, cotton and scrap iron, to belligerents under a quota system based on the volume of peace-time shipments.

This was authoritatively revealed yesterday in State Department circles. It was intimated that legislation authorizing the imposition of export quotas against belligerents may be sought when Congress convenes. But until then the Administration will do all within its power to prevent the development of abnormal trade resulting from war and to shun "blood money" in the form of war profits.

All this was made clear by a high official. Although it may not be attributed to the spokesman in question, it is none the less authoritative and may be taken as the firm and settled policy of this Government.

Would Clarify Stand.

The purpose of this expression of policy was to clarify the present situation, which has been somewhat clouded by criticisms that the United States actually, if not theoretically, was aiding the League of Nations in the imposition of sanctions against Italy and by observations of the last two days that this Government had been "left holding the bag" and was "out on a limb" as a result of the League's postponement of a meeting called to consider an embargo against oil shipments to Italy.

There was evidence that State Department officials were chagrined and annoyed by the latter contentions and irritated by criticisms, such as that of Frank H. Simonds at the Town Hall forum Sunday night, when he contended that the Administration's course had exceeded both the letter and spirit of the neutrality act passed last August.

In view of the situation, a spokesman for the Administration undertook to clarify the American policy, first, by pointing out that the neutrality act was the basis and guide of that policy, and, secondly, by

Stampeding Antelope Plunge to Icy Death

Medicine Hat, Alberta, Nov. 26 (AP).—A stampeding herd of 100 antelope plunged to death today in the icy waters of the Saskatchewan River near here. At one point, as the ice broke away under their weight, 50 animals went through into the deep water together.

Thousands of antelope are roaming the rangelands of southern Alberta, menacing the cattle pastures. The Alberta government has declared an open season on antelope, December 2 to 10, as few hunters took advantage of an earlier open season, the first in 15 years.

Making of Gold by Alchemy Forecast by College Professor

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 26.—Making gold by alchemy in laboratories was predicted tonight by Prof. S. C. Lind, of the University of Minnesota.

The cost of so doing, he said, appears prohibitive, but "science has a long reach" and price levels for such gold might fall.

His forecast was made in a summary of chemistry achievements issued by the American Chemical Society.

Discovery of radioactivity, which opens up the new possibility, was made two years ago by Irene, the daughter of Mme. Curie, and Irene's husband, Frederique Joliot. By it, high-power laboratory vacuum tubes bombard common substances with rays of various kinds.

Some of the atoms in the bombarded materials change into other elements—which is straight alchemy. Changes already discovered with artificial radioactivity made chemical elements whose existence was never before known.

"Artificial radioactivity," Prof. Lind, stated, "is less than two years old, but already has more than 70 new atoms to its credit. The scientific event is accomplished. What of the practical? Is the day coming when gold can be made in quantity and at a price that would topple it as a monetary standard?

"Nothing stands in the way except the energy barrier of the nucleus. This can be overcome at a cost."

Condon Holds Key to Kidnaping 'And My Cell,' Says Hauptmann

Prisoner Calls on 'Jafsie' to Make Full Statement; Lumber Resembling Wood of Famous Ladder, Letters, Reported Found in Ashby, Mass.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 26.—From his death-house cell today Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted murderer of the Lindbergh baby, called upon Dr. John F. Condon, ransom negotiations emissary, to make a "full" statement.

"Not only do I wish this in my interest but also in the course of justice," he wrote in a statement he signed and gave to Egbert Rosecrans and C. Lloyd Fisher, two of his attorneys.

Dr. Condon, he added, "is holding the key in this case and with it the key of my cell."

His statement came following allegations of the discovery of new Lindbergh ransom bills and of new kidnap evidence.

But from every official source, including Hauptmann's attorneys, came prompt disclaimers of knowledge of the purported discoveries.

An investigator for Hauptmann who requested that his name be withheld, said on "unimpeachable authority, despite denials of police, that approximatley $700 in ransom money has been received by the Boston Federal Reserve Bank since the Bronx carpenter's arrest.

He further announced that a house near Ashby, Mass., had yielded a letter dated March 10, 1932, ten days after the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped, stating:

"Why don't you return that poor little Lindbergh baby? You have had it long enough."

In the same house, this source declared, was found wood of "the same type" as that used in construction of the famous kidnap ladder, down which the kidnaper was alleged to have carried the baby from the nursery in Col. Lindbergh's Sourland Hills home.

The letter, the investigator said, showed several characteristics similar to those evident in the ransom letters.

Boy Stabbed to Death by Pal He Punched for Calling 'Sissy'

The neighborhood boys were 'ragging" William Wesley Suddath, 15, of 3621 Prospect avenue, in Georgetown yesterday, calling him "sissy." Last night, when he sought vindication with his fists, one of them thrust the blade of a 10-cent-store penknife into his heart.

"He called me sissy and I wanted to fight," he gasped.

From a second-floor stoop at the rear of 1224 Thirty-sixth street, the playmate called to William the hated word, "sissy," neighborhood children told police. William ascended the stairs two at a time and planted his fist on the younger boy's mouth.

The younger boy pulled his penknife and struck out once, the blade piercing William's heart.

William was carried into the Georgetown emergency room by George H. Carter, a Capital Transit Co. employe, of 14 Fowler's Hill northwest.

William's mother, Mrs. Lillie Suddath, has been seriously ill for a week. The doctor called again last night, but before he went to her room Vernon Suddath, the boy's father, cautioned against mentioning the tragedy.

The father expects to be laid off today from a construction job he has held for four years.

The playmate who stabbed William will be held for a coroner's inquest Friday.

Waste in Bread Hit as Boosting Cost to Buyer

The NRA's consumers' division yesterday stepped into the bread-price row with a published broadside stressing "waste" as a factor in high bread costs, and charging the baking industry with "still using practically the same methods of distribution and sales that were used 20 years ago."

Using the division's publication, The Consumer, as an instrument for charges that stale bread returns have bolstered loaf costs several million dollars annually, the NRA unit headed by Walton Hamilton appeared in a new militant role.

Coincident with publication of The Consumer, Donald E. Montgomery, AAA consumers' counsel, who has been studying bread prices, noted a continued slightly upward trend in loaf costs which he said is "in line with ingredient price increases." He disclosed that a questionnaire sent out to leading bakers has asked information on stale bread returns and distribution expenses.

One-Tenth Cent Advance.

Bureau of Labor Statistics quotations on retail bread prices in 56 cities for the period October 23 to November 5 showed an average upward trend of one-tenth of a cent, compared with a more general upward advance in the preceding fortnight.

Washington is second on the list of cities in which bread prices moved up in the period October 8 to November 5, showing a local retail advance over the month of nine-tenths of a cent. Milwaukee, the only city with a steeper increase, witnessed a full one-cent price climb.

The NRA Consumers Division's bread price study, over the signature of Karl Hauck, commented on Secretary Henry A. Wallace's statement last month that the price of bread had advanced more than the increase in ingredient costs warranted, and the bakers' reply that processing taxes and the AAA crop curtailment policies caused the price advance.

Hits Stale Bread Returns.

"Both have substance to their arguments," the statement said. "However, there is one factor which contributes greatly to bread costs, which should engage the attention of the consumer in his search for the way out, but which has been more or less obscured in the flurry of topical controversy."

This factor, the statement made clear, embraced distribution costs and stale bread returns.

"The sale and distribution are usually made through driver-salesmen who deliver the bread directly to the grocery store," the study continued. "The driver-salesmen in their effort to have the local storekeeper purchase greater and greater quantities of their brand of bread have developed the practice of leaving bread on consignment.

"That which is not sold is returned to the baker the following day. The result has been waste and higher costs on the portion of the bread which is sold by each firm."

Here the NRA publication asserted that chain stores can manufacture and sell bread at a lower figure than most other bakers, because they "schedule production more accurately" and need employ merely deliverymen, rather than driver-salesmen. It further pointed out that no bread is consigned by the chains "in the course of competition among brands, and there are no stale returns going back to the bakery."

Hauck estimated that the stale bread loss runs into several million dollars every year.

Consumer Pays!

"The consumer, naturally, pays for this loss," his statement continued. "If stale returns were eliminated in the industry, a saving of from 4 per cent to 12 per cent would be made—and this saving could be passed on to the consumer—and might enable the industry to keep prices at their present levels instead of raising them, even though ingredient costs do increase."

Montgomery, who as AAA consumer counsel has closely co-operated with the NRA consumer's division, said last night he had not read the NRA study, but was seeking to elicit information on distribution and stale bread losses through the questionnaire he has sent to bakers in Washington and other cities. He has received only a few replies to date, he said.

Ingredient costs for an average pound loaf of bread ranged from 3.64 cents on October 8, to 3.42 on November 5, Montgomery said. The margin between ingredient costs and retail price ranged in the same period from 4.66 cents to 5.08 cents, he estimated, but that margin includes labor, distribution and overhead costs.

Montgomery's study of the ten cities which experienced bread price increases in the month from October 8 to November 5, showed both Washington and Philadelphia had the same nine-tenths of a cent loaf increase.

Other cities noting a lesser advance were New Haven, Conn., six-tenths of a cent; Bridgeport, Conn., five-tenths of a cent; Norfolk, Louisville and Los Angeles, four-tenths of a cent; Richmond, Va., and Butte, Mont., three-tenths of a cent.

Hull Outstanding New Dealer; Neutrality Policies of U. S. Undergo Test.

By Raymond Clapper

WHEN the bright young New Dealers mobilized in Washington in the spring of 1933 and unrolled their fancy blue prints for the more abundant life, Secretary of State Cordell Hull seemed a pathetic figure.

He was an elderly man, an old-fashioned low-tariff Tennessee Democrat, drawling and plodding. He hadn't been inside a college classroom for years and was completely out of touch with modern thought among the better minds. Frankfurter, Tugwell, Jerome Frank and the other fleet-footed thinkers could run rings around old Cordell. They regarded him as an honorary Secretary of State.

Even Mr. Roosevelt, who was playing quarterback at that time, appeared to have this view of Hull, and he placed his No. 1 brain-trust adviser, Prof. Ray Moley in the State Department as Assistant Secretary in name and the real works in fact.

Hull certainly never would have been voted the member of the Roosevelt Administration most likely to make his mark in the world.

But three years later Hull stands head and shoulders above the New Deal crowd. He is practically the only one whose prestige has risen rather than declined.

One poll after another reveals the unpopularity of many of the New Deal policies. Other administrators have floundered from failure to failure. Hull has pushed doggedly, directly, and without letup and is now on the way to going down in the history of this Administration identified with two revolutionary policies. He doesn't look or talk like a revolutionary, but in results he is more so than Dr. Tugwell.

First, Hull is largely responsible for the reciprocal tariff policy which has flowered in the Canadian trade agreement. It is a revolutionary departure in tariff making. Haggling over rates is taken out of the log-rolling lobbying, hog-trough atmosphere of Congress during a tariff fight and transferred to an executive chamber where trade experts of this country strike bargains with trade experts of other nations and emerge with a schedule of tariffs which are based upon the complementary trade of two countries.

The advance in this technique over the old-style political tariff making, where tariffs were regarded as something affecting only this country, is immeasurable. The tariff is now treated as an international relationship intimately associated with the exchange of goods.

Second, Hull is evolving a neutrality policy which, while in line with the neutrality resolution of Congress, pioneers on a course directly opposite that which we have followed from the infant days of the Nation. While Congress set the general pattern, Hull is building a vastly more significant superstructure on the foundations outlined in the neutrality act.

Both of these are monumental policies, of the most basic character. Beside them, the alphabetical tinkering of the various New Deal agencies seem superficial and often trivial.

The country has not yet fully grasped the meaning of the neutrality policy which Secretary Hull is evolving. To many it has appeared as an attempt to hitch up surreptitiously with the League of Nations in the imposition of sanctions. At first glance this seems a natural explanation. But it is not the real one.

The chances are that Secretary Hull would have pursued his present course even if the League had not touched the sanctions question. It happens that our course appears to support the sanctions program because by withholding shipments we hit Italy, since Ethiopia could not get our goods anyway.

But we have not, as the League has, designated Italy as the aggressor. We are not attempting to boycott her and exclude her products from this country. We are not discriminating between the belligerents.

We are attempting to do two things:

1. To keep out of war.
2. To refrain from feeding war flames in order to derive what some Administration officials call blood profits from the sale of materials.

Our old policy was that, as a neutral, we had a right to sell anything we could sell and to sell it anywhere we could. We fought wars for the right to deliver raw materials to one or both belligerents.

Now our policy is that we should not sell munitions to either belligerent. And more significant, we are trying to discourage sale of raw materials needed for war. The theory behind this is that it is not right that this country should feed a war in order to make money out of selling supplies. The Administration is attempting to develop a formula by which sales of raw materials to belligerents would be restricted to normal peace-time quantities.

In addition to the ethical principle involved, there is also the practical consideration that once we start selling materials in abnormal amounts, we build up a vested interest in the war and, as happened in the World War, tend to be gradually sucked in. It is coming to be realized that you cannot, over a long period, have both war profits and peace.

Therefore, even though the League powers weaken and do not crack down as roughly as had been at first expected, this Government apparently does not intend to relax in its determination to discourage sales to the belligerents. Our interest is not in backing up the League, but in keeping clear of the war ourselves.

Of course, as was pointed out here a few days ago, it is not the present war between Italy and Ethiopia that is the real cause of concern and that is prompting such a revolutionary change of policy here. We are fearful of another general European war. We are experimenting to find how we can keep out of the next one. Some say that will be impossible. No one believes it will be easy. Certainly it will be expensive in terms of trade. But we are now using the present minor war as an opportunity to experiment, to educate our own people in the costs of neutrality, and to build up the foundations of a policy which will stand the stress of a major conflict.

Our little brown brothers in the Philippines are just now discovering the blessings of independence and what freedom means.

Hardly had they celebrated the birth of their new Commonwealth and the breaking of the chains of American imperialism when President Quezon broke the bad news. He announced a defense program calling for conscription of all males at the age of 21, military training starting in the schools at the age of 10, conscription of all national resources in time of war, and defense of the islands by every man, woman and child.

Ickes Threshes PWA Purchase Of Alien Goods

Acts as Protests Mount; Reiterates Bidding Plots to Roosevelt.

Protests against use of foreign-produced materials in construction projects financed with relief money continued yesterday with announcement by Secretary Ickes that he had ordered an investigation of the use of imported asphalt on streets and roads.

Complaints against importation of asphalt came from Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas. A number of independent oil companies producing asphalt from crude petroleum have taken up the fight.

Ickes said he did not know whether any imported asphalt was being used in connection with PWA projects, but that information he obtains will be available to any interested department. Most of the street and road work is being done by WPA and the Bureau of Public Roads.

Ickes also revealed that he had sent to President Roosevelt what he believed to be another instance of "prima facie evidence of collusive bidding" by four steel companies seeking to furnish steel on a PWA job. This is the third charge of collusion made against the companies by Ickes. The charges will be investigated by the Federal Trade Commission.

The latest charge of collusion involves purchase of 3,300 tons of steel pilings for a dry-dock project at Miami. Identical bids of $185,000 were submitted, leading to a request by local authorities for an additional Government allotment of $125,000.

The companies involved are Inland, Jones & Laughlin, Carnegie, and Kalman, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co. Ickes said the contract was finally awarded to the company whose plant was farthest from the point of delivery. The bids were f. o. b. Miami and Ickes said the award to a distant plant provided more revenue for the railroads.

There were no bids from German concerns on the steel contract for the Miami project.

Regulations increasing the PWA differential in favor of American materials from 15 per cent to 25 per cent were promulgated by Ickes in an administrative order. Ickes also ordered that no foreign materials should be purchased in any event without his approval. The order also asked that any evidence of collusion or unfair practices be referred to him for investigation by the proper authorities.

Tax Figures Show Public Drinks Less

Legal Liquor Sales 64% Below Saloon Era.

By the Associated Press.

Treasury statisticians said yesterday the American public is consuming much less legal liquor now than in the "wettest" pre-prohibition days.

They said consumption of distilled spirits (hard liquor) is running about 64 per cent of the preprohibition peak.

Basing their figures on tax-paid withdrawals of liquor from distilleries and storage places for sale, they said consumption in September was 8,931,542 tax gallons, or at the rate of 107,172,000 gallons per year. During the fiscal year 1917, consumption was 164,291,683 gallons, highest on record.

Gin is the only kind running ahead of preprohibition days. In the fiscal year 1935, 5,477,823 gallons were consumed, compared with 1,130,210 in the last year before prohibition, and a peak of 5,408,321 in 1917.

Consumption by classification in the last fiscal year was: Whisky, 50,780,940 gallons; rum, 313,124; gin, 5,477,823; brandy, 1,435,455; alcohol, 17,066,651.

Slated to Replace McCarl

Bell, Carr Lead In Speculation On McCarl Job

By the Associated Press.

Speculation over who is likely to be President Roosevelt's choice as the next Government "no" man centered attention yesterday upon Daniel W. Bell and Francis J. Carr.

The $10,000-a-year post of Comptroller General, which J. R. McCarl has filled for 14 years, will become vacant when his term expires next June 30. Reappointment is forbidden by law.

Generally informed sources reported that both Bell and Carr are now in line for consideration. Both are in the New Deal family—Bell as acting director of the budget, and Carr as controller of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

"Too Busy" to Talk.

McCarl, whose "noes" to New Dealers and strict scrutiny of all expenditures to insure compliance with the law led to a movement last spring booming him for the Republican nomination for President, was reported "too busy" studying work relief projects yesterday to discuss his future plans.

Bell was in Warm Springs, Ga., discussing next year's budget with the President, while Carr presumably was at his headquarters in Knoxville.

A civil service "career man" in the Treasury, Bell was named acting budget director 15 months ago when Lewis W. Douglas resigned because of disagreement with the Roosevelt spending program.

Keeps Service Status.

He is in his early 40's, and is completing his twenty-fourth year in Government service. His unwillingness to relinquish his civil service status is reported to be one of the chief reasons why "acting" precedes his present title.

Carr joined TVA after serving as controller of Aviation Corporation and its some 70 subsidiaries. He was credited with installing one of the first budget control systems for department store use when with Filene's store in Boston. Later he organized factory control systems for a number of concerns, and during the war was an officer in the Ordnance Department. He is 43.

Liquor Firm's Gift For Church Is Refused

Helena, Mont., Nov. 26 (AP).—A $500 gift from a liquor company—to help finance a new church building—was turned down today by the St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church here.

Home Shortage Of Huge Scope In U. S. Is Seen

By the Associated Press.

A housing shortage "greater than any government is prepared to meet" was foreseen yesterday by Peter Grimm, assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, as he noted a "perceptible" loosening of private cash in the building field.

Grimm, whose job it is to study and seek to invigorate building, said it would be impossible to estimate the cost of essential construction.

He is preparing for Congress a report on the Nation's residential building needs. This report, he said, will be the result of a general study of all recommendations from responsible quarters.

Expressing hope that private industry will find a way to push along the program started by Government housing agencies, Grimm, in an interview, emphasized difficulties to be faced in the needed expansion program.

Activity Long Deferred.

"Included in the Nation's needs are not only the normal replacements," he said, "but houses resulting from the unscrambling of families and deferred marriages—and also the building of houses to replace those unfit for habitation."

Grimm said the Nation was bequeathed an inheritance of "rotten old houses" because of long-deferred building activity.

"The country, with all of its resources," he said, "cannot soon meet this problem."

By way of coincidence the Home Owners Loan Corporation reported that during 1934 more homes burned own "or fell down" than were replaced during the same year.

It said the shortage was reflected in October residential construction, which showed the biggest month not only in 1935 but since July, 1931. The average daily value of contracts for the first 15 days of last month was shown to be $2,429,000.

Agrees With Freed Figures.

Commenting on the recent report of the committee on economic recovery, headed by A. S. Freed, which recommended construction of 750,000 homes a year by 1938, Grimm agreed the figure was an accurate representation of the "potential requirements."

The committee's statement that its recommendations were based on the English home-building program brought a reply, however, that "our problems are totally different."

"No comparison can be drawn," Grimm said, "between European problems and American. We have 48 States to deal with and cannot tell each unit what it must do in the housing field."

As for a sharp downward adjustment of the costs of building funds—one of the aims of the committee—Grimm expressed the view there can be no arbitrary figure set.

"A downward adjustment of the rate will come," he said, "as a result of the weight of available money itself. The financial markets are glutted with money which is not willing to lend itself. But the pressure of money in savings institutions is slowly but perceptibly making itself felt."

Winchester, England, Nov. 26 (AP).—Admiral Sir Edward Eden Bradford, 76, retired British naval commander who headed the third British naval squadron during the World War, died today.

$250,000 Granted FPC.

The Federal Power Commission yesterday was granted an additional $250,000 by the PWA to continue its inquiry into water resources, as related to production and distribution of electric power.

When the American Institute of Public Opinion asked voters whom they favored for Republican candidate for President in 1936 ballots poured in. There is tremendous interest in this question. The results of the voting will appear exclusively in The Sunday Post in this city in the next issue. Watch for it!

Canadian Pact Held Boon to Dominion

Lumber Sales to U. S. Due for Rise, Minister Says.

By the Associated Press.

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—Provision under the Canada-United States trade treaty for sale in the United States of softer Canadian woods should "go a very considerable way toward restoring the best market we ever had," W. D. Euler, minister of trade and commerce, told a conference in forestry research here today.

"Unfortunately," continued Euler, "some of our friends in the United States seem to be a bit concerned that their interests will be prejudiced. I am speaking of the lumber people there. But when we reflect that in our boom year, 1929, when we sold them nearly 1,500,000,000 board feet of lumber, even then we supplied only 4 per cent of the total consumption in that country, and when we think now of the small quota which we are allowed under the agreement, I imagine there is not a great deal of room for alarm."

Lynch Mob in Mexico Flees From Air Bombs

Mexico City, Nov. 26 (AP).—Dispatches to the newspaper Excelsior today said a man had been saved from lynching near Las Carboneras, in the State of Jalisco, when Federal airplanes dropped bombs near the would-be lynchers, described as rebels.

The reports stated Manuel Topete, elder brother of the Governor of Jalisco, Evarardo Topete, had reached the town of Etzatlan, describing his escape from death as "miraculous." He said a rope had been placed around his neck and he had been lifted off the ground several times when the Federal planes suddenly appeared. The aviators let loose a number of bombs, and the mob fled, leaving Topete unconscious on the ground.

Static Storms Held Silencer Of Ellsworth

Byrd and Another Polar Flier Revive Hope for Missing Explorer.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Magnetic storms which would limit the range of his radio signals were cited today as the probable reason for the three-day silence of Lincoln Ellsworth, Antarctic explorer.

Guy C. Hutcheson, one of the four radio experts, who accompanied Admiral Richard E. Byrd to Little America, said the magnetic storms would make radio signals audible for onlv a few miles.

Ellsworth and his pilot, Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, have not been heard from since a wireless message at 10:48 a. m. (E. S. T.) Saturday to their base ship, the Wyatt Earp.

Hutcheson said a check of his polar records showed that during the last two weeks of November, 1934, Little America experienced one of its worst electric storms.

"On Thanksgiving Day of that year the expedition did not hear a signal from any place in the world, including trail transmitters only 40 or 50 miles away," he said.

The Byrd radio equipment, he added, was "all-powerful," but magnetic conditions made it of little value.

"Therefore, with Ellsworth dependent upon a hand-driven emergency set, failure to get signals through at this time is easily understandable," he declared.

Because magnetic storms "seldom last more than 72 hours," Hutcheson said that if Ellsworth is not heard from soon "I will be inclined to think he has crashed, or the transmitter has gone completely out of commission."

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP).—Admiral Richard E. Byrd, conqueror of both poles, said today he thinks Lincoln Ellsworth, unheard from for four days of a flight across the Antarctic Continent, had "made it."

"I see no reason to worry," the admiral declared when advised of the position Ellsworth gave when last reported.

"I don't see any reason to question its (the flight's) success simply because they're out of radio communication," he added. "They possibly are out of range. You can't get very far with most ground sets."

Girl Believed Safe From Alleged Killer

By the Associated Press.

Twin Falls, Idaho, Nov. 26.—Officers tonight abandoned their search for dark-heared Mildred Hook, of Tacoma, Wash., missing after a mad ride with her former husband, Douglas Van Vlack, that resulted in the slaying of one officer and the wounding of another yesterday.

Sheriff E. F. Prater, declaring he believed the 22 year-old girl escaped uninjured from Van Vlack as they wandered in the wind-swept desert last night, said posses had been called in from the hunt. Van Vlack was captured last night as he lay in a roadside ditch numb with cold. Prater said he was convinced Miss Hook had obtained a ride back to Tacoma, where Van Vlack picked her up from a street Saturday.

State Patrolman Fontaine Cooper was killed and Deputy Sheriff Henry C. Givens wounded seriously late yesterday when they stopped Van Vlack's car near Buhl, Idaho.

Cook Quits EHFA; Jones Fight Denied

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator, has resigned as head of the Electric Home and Farm Authority, it was learned last night.

Reports that the resignation followed a controversy between Cooke and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, over terms of loans by the EHFA for purchase of electric appliances, were discredited at the RFC, where the resignation was understood to be due to lack of time on Cooke's part to devote to the EHFA. Published reports were that Cooke and Jones had disagreed on the length of the repayment period and the security for the appliance loans.

of the Department of Justice, said he knew nothing of the purported discovery of new ransom bills as evidence.

The Boston Globe, in a copyrighted story, said Fisher had made at least four trips to Boston and that an attorney represented the defense there.

Of this Fisher said "nothing whatever has developed in Massachusetts."

"We have no letters that match the handwriting in the ransom notes, no wood that matches the ladder, no toys, no nothing."

Of a report that the chief defense investigator had said he learned Lindbergh ransom bills had turned up in Boston and Worcester, Fisher said:

"An investigation was made recently at Worcester, but nothing important developed."

Dr. Condon, elderly Bronx school teacher, swore at Hauptmann's trial at Flemington last January that the Bronx carpenter was the man to whom he paid the $50,000 ransom on the night of April 2, 1932, a month after the kidnaping. He positively identified Hauptmann in court as the "John" of the negotiations.

Says He Was Sent For.

A week ago in Boston he told a Professional Women's Club Hauptmann "has already sent for me three times, but as yet I have not gone to see him."

It was this remark which moved Hauptmann to issue a statement on his thirty-sixth birthday, a short time before his wife, Anna, and his spiritual adviser, the Rev. D. G. Werner, of New York, called on him.

Dr. Condon's story that Hauptmann had requested to see him was false, the prisoner said.

"For what reason just Dr. Condon is giving such false statements out is easy to understand," the statement said. "* * * Everything what I know in this terrible crime I have said from the witness chair. In my present state I would be glad if I would know something more about it so I could lighten my suffering and the suffering of my family."

Reiterates Innocence.

He reiterated his innocence and added "it is my deepest desire to proof to the world that I have spoken the truth."

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who headed the prosecution at the trial, declined to comment on the statement. Dr. Condon himself was not immediately available. In his Boston address last week the educator said he still was working on the case because "there are some things we wish to clear."

The Lindberghs, Col. Breckinridge testified, as well as himself, were convinced of Dr. Condon's sincerity and honesty of purpose.

Hill Folk Angry At Aid Offered Edith Maxwell

all I got to say is, they better be careful. They're liable to get the judge mad. He ruled for her during the trial—anybody'll tell you that. But if these folks keep meddlin' and get him riled there's no tellin' what he'll do if they have another trial."

Most of the townspeople are either puzzled or disgusted over Edith's letters of sympathy from all parts of the country.

"You'd think she was some fancy moving-picture star," was the way one man put it. "I hear she got a letter all the way from Mexico today. Seems to me folks'd be better off if they'd mind their own business and let us mind our'n."

Restaurant Prospers.

The letters are read by the jailer's two or three helpers before they are passed on to Edith in her cell. So are the enclosed newspaper clippings.

Everybody in Wise knows efforts are being made to raise a fund to carry on Edith's defense. A few are mildly in favor of it. Most persons regard it as pure foolishness or vicious meddling.

"Why, say, that girl got off easy," said one lanky mountaineer between gulps of beef stew in B. F.'s cafe.

B. F.'s, a small place with high-backed green and white booths, a blatant phonograph and the inevitable display of potato chips in waxed bags, has prospered since Judge H. A. W. Skeen passed sentence on Edith.

Visitors Barred From Jail.

Few tourists ordinarily go through Wise—it is on a secondary highway traveled by almost as many cows as automobiles—but a good many persons are finding their way these days to the town which holds Edith Maxwell.

And when they stop at the cafe they are told without much encouragement that this is the place where Edith sat up until 'most midnight, drinking ginger-ale and eating potato chips with a neighbor boy. It was her daring to stay out after dark that enraged her father, already quarrelsome from liquor.

Maybe Edith has eaten at B. F.'s restaurant. But on the fatal night in July she and the neighbor boy, 22-year-old Raymond Meade, stopped at the little Ritz, which is on the way to Pound, the home of the Maxwells, about 12 miles up the road.

The new Colonial Hotel also has profited from Edith's mushroom fame. Clubwomen, representatives of church and welfare societies, have come from neighboring cities to see what "we can do for the girl."

Meanwhile the 21-year-old school teacher sits in her cell, reading letters from strangers who want to help her "come free." The curious sightseers are not permitted to see her.

"Some of 'em," said the jailer's assistant, "say they just want to look at her. That don't make sense to me. She ain't so much to look at. Besides, I have orders to keep everybody out. She had so many visitors there for a while that we had to stop it."

"I can't understand," he added, "why everybody's getting so excited about her. Only a couple days after she got 25 years a man got 'double life' because he'd killed two men. Nobody's worryin' about him. He'll spend the rest of his days in the penitentiary, but nobody's worked up about that. The Maxwell girl only got 25 years. That'll give her enough time to learn a daughter's got no business striking her pappy."

Women Praise Efforts of Post To Aid Teacher

beth Ramey, of Alexandria, president of the Virginia Federation, asking that she urge all members of the State organization to support the campaign to prevent "grave injustice" to Edith Maxwell, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

This action and a letter to Miss Maxwell expressing the club's sympathy came as the result of resolutions adopted by the organization Monday night, urging business and professional women's clubs throughout the State to take steps to give the convicted school teacher financial aid. In the event such a fund were raised, the Norfolk club went on record as pledging a contribution to it.

Miss Ramey stated last night that she will communicate to all B. & P. W. clubs in the Virginia Federation as soon as the request from Norfolk reaches her.

Mrs. Elsie M. Graff, governor of the Virginia State branch of the National Woman's Party, yesterday made public resolutions passed by that organization which said, in part, the Associated Press reported:

"The verdict imposes cruel and unusual punishment on a woman, an innocent party, acting in self-defense. Because no woman was allowed to sit on the jury, she was not given a trial by the peers of her country. We recommend a speedy appeal so that her rights and liberties may be justly protected and justice to one of our sex may be done."

Echoing this opinion, Mrs. Albert H. Cohen, past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Arlington County, said: "It looks to me as if the girl did not get a fair deal. We women of Virginia feel keenly about not being allowed to serve on juries. It is a very fine thing for The Post to try and help Edith Maxwell."

"Glad to see The Post take up her cause," said Mrs. Ruth Lowell, president of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County. "Let me cheer you on."

Jurors Accuse Pair In Poison Soda Deaths

San Francisco, Nov. 26 (AP).—A coroner's jury accused two men of "criminal negligence" tonight after an inquest into San Francisco's poisoned baking soda mystery which caused three deaths. The jury named Nick Manno, salvage firm owner, and Joseph Rosenthal, store proprietor, in its verdict which declared the three victims died from taking the poisoned product.

Post Receives Funds to Help Edith Maxwell

Sympathetic Donors Raise $89.85 in Few Hours to Appeal Conviction.

Response to The Washington Post's campaign for donations to assure Edith Maxwell the best legal counsel in an appeal from her conviction of the murder of her father was immediate yesterday.

The drive was only a few hours old when a total of $89.85 had been realized toward a fund to obtain the Wise, Va., girl's freedom.

No sooner had the story from the Virginia hills by Virginia Lee Warren been read in yesterday's Post than sympathetic persons began their contributions.

One Virginia woman, in sending her contribution, said: "I'm only too glad to send my small contribution to this fund and wish I were able to send $1,000 instead. The girl should never have been tried. When a man gets full of liquor he has no sense. The jury was as ignorant as he is."

Italian Armies Lose in South, Defenders Say

Invaders Reported Pushed Back, Gorrahei in Hands of Ethiopians.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 26.—Couriers from the south brought word to Emperor Haile Selassie today that the inspired Ethiopian forces had hurled Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's armies back to the approximate line they held at the outbreak of hostilities.

The Italians reportedly have evacuated Gorrahei and Gerlogubi and have fallen back to their old stronghold at Wardare and Ualual. Ualual, scene of the bloody clash last December which precipitated the war, is in the disputed district between Ogaden and Italian Somaliland.

An Ethiopian victory at the Anole Wells in the Fafan Valley in which the Ethiopians seized four tanks, two armed trucks and four troop-transport trucks, broke the spirit of the Italian Somaliland troops, government advices said.

The Dubats fled in panic before the vicious Ethiopian onslaught, abandoning the trucks, which were jammed with bodies of men mowed down by Ethiopian gunfire.

The Ethiopians turned captured machine guns upon the Italians and took a terrific toll.

The victory turned into a rout—so the courier reported—as the retreating Italians fell back upon Gorrahi and Gerlogubi. Those armed positions were abandoned by their garrisons, which fell back upon Wardare and Ualual.

The Ethiopians are preparing to re-garrison Gorrahi and Gerlogubi, positions from which previously they were routed by heavy air bombardment combined with assaults by Italian Dubats (native Somalilanders) with heavy loss.

Ethiopians attributed the success in Ogaden to the Emperor's recent flying visit to the front in which he told the troops victory or defeat in Ogaden would determine the fate of Ethiopian freedom.

Officials here were jubilant at the news and forecast the Emperor's presence on the northern front would turn the tables against the Italians there.

Rome Claims Victory.

Rome, Nov. 26 (AP).—One hundred Ethiopians, including two provincial governors, were reported in an official communique today to have been killed during a battle north of Dolo on the southern front.

The Italian losses were announced as four native soldiers killed, five wounded and two missing at Dolo, which lies directly on the border between Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

The communique said:

"The Danakil column has begun again mopping up operations on the eastern border of the plateau. Some 100 Danakils who recently submitted joined in the action.

"On the front of the Eritrean army corps, operations have begun again toward Tembien, while battalions of Black Shirts are organizing the Gheralca territory as far as Abaro Pass.

"On the front of the Second Army Corps, the chieftain, Tedia Fanta, has submitted to us, defeated, with his armed followers. Ethiopian bands which gathered beyond the Wert River, approaching Takkaze, taking several prisoners.

"On the Somaliland front, in the Gureiusa sector, Gen. Rudolfo Graziane received information of a concentration of Ethiopian forces at Lanna-Scilindi, on the West Gestro River, 100 kilometers north of Dolo.

"He sent a swift column, which launched a surprise attack November 22 on the Ethiopian camp.

"After five hours of bitter fighting the enemy was completely routed.

"The aviation forces executed a reconnaissance over Tigre Province. A squadron of Somaliland aviation forces bombarded the Ethiopian fortification of Daggah Bur.

Brazilian Troops Quell Communist Revolt

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

A state of siege, virtually equivalent to martial law, was declared for the whole of Brazil yesterday as the government moved swiftly to quell a revolt in the northeast. Here is a federal machine-gun unit, ready for action in earlier uprising. Warlike scenes like this were re-enacted in troubled area yesterday.

Fugitive Gone 12 Years Comes Back to Prison

Yesterday, because he could not "look a policeman in the face," he asked to be admitted to finish 16 months remaining of a four-year sentence for assault with intent to rob.

Reformatory officials said Hall had gotten out in 1923 while working with a plumbing gang installing fixtures in a building under construction.

Hall returned to the prison from Ohio, where he left a wife and two children. On arrival he told George Brown, guard at the gate, the incredible story of wanting to "get it over with."

"I haven't had a moment's peace of mind since I left. I have been afraid to face a policeman and want to get it over with so I can start with a clean slate," he said.

Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of District Penal Institutions, said Hall would have to serve the remainder of his term, but no more time would be added.

throughout the nation—now under a state of siege proclaimed last night—but there was no indication the movement was spreading.

Official reports from Pernambuco agreed the insurrection was broken there. The rebels were fleeing so fast they left dead, wounded and arms in the streets behind them.

Information from Natal was meager, but authorities believed government troops, aided by state police, were drawing a net around the city and would soon be in a position to dictate surrender of the rebels.

Gas Franchise Refused.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 26.—City council unanimously voted to reject an application for a franchise to distribute natural gas. The application was made by C. M. Hopkins. The nearest gas pipe line to Charles Town is about 70 miles, running through Culpeper County, Va.

Aranha, 'Rebel' Himself, Smiles At Revolution

We Need Political Activity, Says Envoy, Who Led Coup in 1930.

As though it had already passed into history, Brazil's handsome, gray-haired ambassador, Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, spoke yesterday of the revolt in northeast Brazil that has compelled the Brazilian government to declare its third state of siege in five years.

Brief telegrams were coming into the office of the yellow-walled chancery on Whitehaven street northwest, and he translated one that, at 1 p. m., said the rebels had been driven out of the suburbs of the port town of Recife.

Then came another one, just one line in code, signed by the name of the president, Getulio Vargas. Dr. Aranha had it decoded, and then he grinned, infectiously. It was:

"Movement crushed. Troops fleeing interiorward."

The result, Dr. Aranha said, would be new strength for the Vargas government.

"Victory always brings success," he aphorized.

And he cast a sly jibe at the popular party governor of Rio Grande de Norte. Rafael Fernandez, who, two months ago, was the only anti-government candidate to win in gubernatorial elections. Gov. Fernandez, he noted, had been defeated by the rebels in Natal, and had fled to a Mexican coast guard boat. That would mean more strength for the government, after the victory.

"Brazil is a country of evolution," he philosophized. "One must expect ferment. It would be the unexpected thing if there was no ferment. We must have political activity."

"There speaks the true rebel," said a reporter who remembered Dr. Aranha, a trim military figure, leading 300,000 revolutionists sweeping up from Rio Grande do Sul in 1930 to put President Vargas in power.

"Yes," he agreed with a grin. "I had my share of revolution, and—," he grew serious, "if I thought it ever necessary again, I would not hesitate to turn to revolution again."

But then he turned back to the present situation:

"We had public opinion with us then, and that's why we succeeded. But today it's a very small thing. This revolt is only in two towns—in Natal and in Recife—and only in the suburbs in Recife."

Airman's Loves Bared at Trial Of German Spy

Romance Enlivens British Hearing of Dr. Gortz for Espionage.

By the Associated Press.

Margate, England, Nov. 26.—Details of a roadside romance between a British aircraftsman and a pretty German girl, now mentioned in connection with alleged spying, today enlivened an espionage trial here.

The defendant is Dr. Hermann Gortz, a German, remanded for trial in the January sessions of Old Bailey Court on a charge of violating the official secrets act.

The figures in the romance, as revealed by today's evidence, are Marianne Emmig and Kenneth Lewis. The later a young aircraftsman.

Arrested last Friday, charged with having sketched a plan of the Manston Royal Air Force Station, Broadstairs, Kent, Gortz today was remanded on the additional charge of "conspiring to commit offenses against the official secrets act" with the Emmig girl.

Lewis testified today he met the girl near the Manston Airdrome when her motorcycle broke down. Later they had tea at the Broadstairs bungalow, where she lived with Gortz, who introduced her as his niece.

"You must remember that in the next war Great Britain and Germany will be on the same side," he testified she said to him.

He resisted her attempts, he said, to elicit secret information and photographs from him, and divulged nothing which could aid an enemy. He only sent her, at her request, photographs cheaply obtainable at any shop.

When arrested on his recent return from Germany, Gortz was found to have pictures of Manston airplanes and aidrome, mailed to the girl at a Berlin address by Lewis. Gortz also had letters young Lewis had written to the girl.

U. S. Weighing War Trade Ban On Quota Basis

contending that every step taken by this Government had been within the spirit, if not the letter, of that legislation.

The initial action taken by this Government, the declaration of a state of war between Italy and Ethiopia, it was pointed out, was taken directly under the mandate of the neutrality act. So were the proclamations placing an embargo on the shipment of actual arms, ammunition and implements of war, and warning Americans off belligerent ships. The President's warning against trade and economic and business relations with the belligerents was supplementary to these other actions, it was asserted.

Such was the American policy until it was found that certain purely war materials, not on the embargo list, were being shipped abroad for war purposes in abnormal quantities, as compared with recent periods.

This development, it was pointed out, raised the question as to whether this Government, having banned the export of actual arms, ammunition and implements of war, should place its hands in its pockets and complacently stand by while a flood of essential materials out of which the same arms, ammunition and implements of war could be manufactured wholesale overnight was going forward to one of the belligerents.

To do so, it was asserted, would have been a patent violation of the whole object and spirit of the neutrality act, so the Administration set out to do what it could to discourage such shipments.

The objectives of the neutrality act and of the steps taken so far by this Government, it was asserted, were three: First, to keep the country out of war at all hazards and as far from the conflict in every way as possible, second, to prevent this country from feeding the flames of war in order to derive war profits, and, third, to prevent the development of war trade, which might in time draw this country into a sympathetic bond with one or another of the belligerents.

In pursuing these objectives, it was further explained, this Government has not understood that it had any duty or obligation, from any viewpoint, to supply necessary war materials to belligerent countries and thus help protract a war. Indeed, in the light of the country's interest in world peace and its obligations under the Kellogg Pact, the contrary was conceived to be true, it was asserted.

Independent Action.

In pursuing this policy, the United States has followed a separate and independent course. No nation or group of nations, it was emphatically asserted, has known what this Government proposed to do until the action was publicly announced. It is true that certain steps taken by the United States paralleled action by other nations designed to promote peace or encourage the abbreviation of the East African conflict.

But likewise there have been notable differences between the American program and that pursued by other nations, it was contended. For example, the peace agencies abroad adjudged and proclaimed an aggressor in this war. The United States had nothing to do with that and has made no distinction between the belligerents.

Other nations abroad are undertaking to assist one of the billigerents, it was pointed out. The United States is not undertaking to assist either. Efforts have been made abroad to interfere with imports from one of the belligerents. This Government, it was argued, has not sought to interfere with imports from either of the belligerents, or, so far, with the normal flow of exports.

The spokesman for the State Department reiterated that this country is pursuing its own separate course and acting on its own initiative in this matter without the remotest agreement of any description with any nation or collection of nations.

The Administration, he continued, has no apologies to make for its efforts to keep this Nation out of war and to avoid feeding the flames of war for the sake of profits for a few individuals. Critics may censure that policy and may scoff at it, it was asserted, but the Administration is confident it is carrying out the letter and the spirit of the neutrality act.

In a subordinate and secondary way, the Administration also is keeping in mind the country's interests and obligations with respect to peace as they relate to the Kellogg Pact, the spokesman explained. But no matter what any country or group of countries do in the present situation, this Government, it was reiterated, will hew to the course it has set for itself and will pursue that course in respect to future belligerents as well as those struggling now in Africa.

Concededly, difficulties confront the execution of this program. The immediate objective is to restrict American exports to the belligerents to their normal flow. The task of determining what is a normal volume of exports is one chiefly for the Government's statisticians, it was explained, and they have set about determining it on the basis of the trade of previous comparable periods.

This was the first official indication that consideration was being given to setting up, formally or informally, a quota system on exports of war material to serve as a guide for the Administration's neutrality policy. At present the Administration has no authority to subject any exports to a quota system, except through the exercise of pressure on public opinion.

Proposals to give the President authority to impose quotas on exports of war materials, however, have been made in various quarters from time to time. It was a part of the neutrality program outlined in the spring of 1935 by Charles Warren, who supplied the inspiration for the present neutrality legislation. Warren proposed authority for the President to embargo exports of any commodity appearing on a belligerent's contraband list in excess of the annual average for, say, the previous three or five peace-time years.

This is an aspect of the neutrality situation which is certain to come before Congress next year. For the present, the Administration will object only to exports of war material—listed some days ago by Secretary of State Cordell Hull—in excess of the normal trade of the preceding year or so. Such a policy was inaugurated when Hull made no objection to cotton shipments because they did not exceed the normal volume. Subsequently he said cotton would be added to his list of proscribed articles, should such shipments become abnormal.

Politics in WPA Hit by Jobless, Sen. Hastings

Delaware G. O. P. Leader Cites Discrimination in Relief Aid.

Opponents from the left and opponents from the right attacked the Work Progress Administration yesterday.

From the left wing came the warning of David Lasser, chairman of the Workers Alliance of America, an organization of unemployed alleged to be more than pink in its policies, that strikes would be organized on relief projects wherever union wages are not paid.

From the right wing came an attack by Senator Daniel O. Hastings, Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial committee, who said that "relief reeks with political debauchery."

Lasser, heading a group of about 50 unemployed persons and accompanied by a police escort almost as large, gave his warning directly to Jacob Baker, assistant WPA administrator.

Hastings merely had his statement mimeographed and sent to the newspapers.

Raps "Starvation Wages."

While most of his followers stood outside WPA headquarters, appearing almost as bored as the policemen assigned to watch them, Lasser delivered his ultimatum. He said that relief workers were being paid "starvation wages" and, echoing the charge of political debauchery, added: "The withdrawal of the Federal Government from the relief picture and the institution of forced labor under the WPA at starvation wages is in our opinion one of the most colossal sell-outs of a population by a political leader for political purposes."

"We want to state here and now," he continued, "that the unemployed of this Nation will refuse to starve in order to make possible the re-election of President Roosevelt."

"'No change of policy is anticipated," Baker replied.

Hastings expressed his opposition in different words:

Sees Impossible Task.

"You eat if you are for Roosevelt; you may starve if you are not."

"Mr. Hopkins, the great relief expert," said Hastings, "has imposed upon himself the task of attempting to defend the indefensible and farcical waste of taxpayers' money in many boondoggling projects. The task is as impossible as it is silly."

Hastings charged that in Williamson County, Ill., notice was given that only loyal and deserving Democrats would have charge of the $810,000 WPA road-building program.

"Out in Wyoming," he continued, "the State Democratic central committee recommended a purge of all relief clients not in sympathy with the National Administration. Thus the Roosevelt political juggernaut goes rolling over hungry anti-New Dealers."

In Erie, Pa., Hastings charged, "unfortunates who have been on relief must contribute to the Democratic finance committee."

Continuing his charges, he said that in Pennsylvania persons on relief who had relatives in State institutions were told to vote Democratic or their relatives would be discharged.

"This," he continued, "reaches the depths of political depredations on human misery."

Workers Threaten Raids.

Lncoln, Nebr., Nov. 26 (AP).—Officers of the Nebraska Workers Alliance at Kearney today told E. F. Witte, State relief director, that grocery stores will be raided and coal cars on sidings looted unless further relief is provided.

The letter was signed by F. A. Amsberry, secretary, and E. M. Webb, sr., president.

New Zealand Election Is Test of Coalition

Wellington, N. Z. (Wednesday), Nov. 27. (AP).—The coalition government of Prime Minister G. W. Forbes faced the first serious test of its strength in four years today when New Zealand balloted for a new House of Representatives.

In four Maori (native) constituencies which voted yesterday, two of the three members declared elected were supporters of the national government.

For the remaining 76 seats there were 246 candidates, including 71 members of the Government Party and a like number of members of the Labor Party, which forms the principal opposition.

U. S. Forces Test of Utilities Law

of the Treasury Department, as special assistant to SEC General Counsel John J. Burns.

In a statement issued here on the New York suit, the commission left no doubt that it will stake the law's constitutional chances on this test case.

At the same time, the commission appealed for immediate registrations and cessation of the landslide of utility injunction suits.

It authorized this statement:

"Inasmuch as this suit will, it is believed, afford ample opportunity to bring the constitutionality of the act speedily before the courts for decision in 'an orderly and economical manner,' the need for a multiplicity of injunction suits in order to effectuate that purpose seems unjustifiable; especially in that registration offers the means for the protection of investors without the sacrifice of any legal or constitutional rights."

It was the first court action brought by the commission since enactment of the utilities control law, and followed a policy announced last week to the effect that it would "proceed promptly to bring civil proceedings against one or more large and important companies, who may fail to register, to enforce compliance with the act and to seek decisions from the Supreme Court sustaining its validity."

The commission pointed out that Electric Bond & Share and its five subsidiaries constitute one of the largest utility holding company systems in the country and, as a group, "present many points of contact with the staute." The suit was tentatively accepted by the Electric Bond & Share.

In its injunction suit filed in the District Supreme Court here, the North American Co. pictured its plight as affecting some 72,000 investors whose holdings represent a market value of more than $300,000,000 and admitted it controlled the Washington Railway & Electric Co., which, through affiliated companies, directed the destinies of the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the newly-formed Capital Transit Co.

Stating that "we are advised by counsel that the act is unconstitutional as a whole in relation to our company," the company asserted the directors were "convinced" that a "primary and imperative duty devolves upon them to secure a final judicial determination that the act is unconstitutional as regards the North American Co. . . . The act specifically provides that if the application of any provision is held to be invalid as to certain persons and circumstances its application to other persons shall not be affected."

The North American suit, filed here by the law firm of McKinney, Flannery & Craighill, challenegd every provision of the "death sentence" act as illegal and void.

The North American's move to enjoin enforcement of the act followed parallel injunction suits brought earlier by the Consolidated Gas Co., of New York, and four of its subsidiaries; by the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation and by the United Gas Improvement Co., of Philadelphia.

Prior to these bids for injunction, a Baltimore Federal court judge had ruled the utilities act invalid in its entirely. This suit now is in process of a United States Circuit Court appeal, in which the Government will participate as a "friend of the court."

Observers here believed it was in an effort to beat this case to a Supreme Court showdown that the Government yesterday picked the Electric Bond & Share Co. for a test of its own.

Meanwhile, the SEC was doing everything in its power to persuade holding companies to register before December 1. Last week it modified its regulations to provide additional assurances that constitutional and legal rights need not be sacrificed by registration.

Exemption Asked.

Application to the SEC for exemption from provisions of the law was made yesterday by the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, on grounds that the company "predominantly" operates an intrastate business in New Jersey. The holding company act was designed to apply only to holding groups doing an interstate business.

Although dissolution provisions of the utilities law do not become operative until 1938, holding companies generally are said to feel that the simple act of registration is the first step toward SEC control of a broad range of activities, including security purchases and sales.

Possibility of additional suits by the SEC on other phases of the law was seen here, although the commission went out of its way to point out that the Electric Bond & Share action offered a broad basis for a test.

"Full Decision" Anticipated.

Electric Bond & Share officials in New York were quoted by Associated Press as stating that they hoped "the proceeding brought today by the Securities and Exchange Commission will be adequate for * * * a full and prompt decision on the validity and extent" of the utility law, adding:

"If so advised by its attorney, it will be the policy of the Electric Bond & Share Co. to co-operate with the commission in securing such a decision."

A number of utility company executives, including C. E. Groesbeck, chairman of the Electric Bond & Share Co., were in conference with SEC officials prior to filing of the Company Replies With Formation of New Organization.

Government's suit yesterday. The SEC still is said to be seeking an agreement to cut down the number of independent utility injunction suits.

Bill Has 20 Pages.

The 20-page bill of complaint filed in New York yesterday by the SEC against the E. B. & S. and its holding companies charged that "it appears the defendants are engaged or are about to engage in acts and practices which constitute or will constitute violations of the public utilities act of 1935."

In the North American suit filed here yesterday, the company, a New Jersey corporation, said it had $23,788,000 principal 5 per cent debentures due in 1961; had $30,317,950 par value 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock, and had 8,575,335 shares of common stock, without par value, which have a present market value of more than $230,000,000.

The company's investment "consists in the main of its ownership of a majority of the voting securities of North American Edison Co., North American Power & Light Co., Washington Railway & Electric Co., and Western Power Co., and its ownership of more than 10 per centum but much less than a majority in each instance of the voting securities of the Detroit Edison Co. and Pacific Gas & Electric Co. * * *"

Eight Grounds Given.

Eight grounds were cited by the company in its attack on the legality of the act. First, it was stated, the company had been advised it should first challenge the act to expedite a ruling. Other grounds were that the act was not a valid exercise of Congressional power to regulate interstate commerce; that it unlawfully sought to delegate legislative power to the Securities and Exchange Commission; that the act deprives the security holders of their right to the due process of law before their property was taken; that it took the stockholders' property without just compensation; that it sought to set up a Federal system of regulation and "destruction upon plaintiff and thereby usurps the powers of the States."

Other grounds cited were that the act purported to set up unreasonable searches and seizures; that it sought to deprive the company of its right to a determination of the legal questions by an appropriate court, and that the act and its provisions were inseparable and that if one was invalid all were.

The suit is not due to come up for court action until after the act becomes effective, unless some intermediate motion is filed by the company.

Tugwell Ready To Attack Farm Tenant Riddle

By the Associated Press.

An attack on the South's farm tenant problem, involving removal of 1,000 tenants onto small farms of their own, was revealed yesterday by Rexford G. Tugwell.

The chief of the Resettlement Administration reported the trial "cases" would be chosen from four parts of the South for purposes of the plan. The experiment, he said, should "be an indication of what can be done in a national way to solve the tenant problem."

He added, in an interview, that he expected to have this and other wide segments of his resettlement plan underway by the time next year's crops have been planted.

Tugwell Airs Views.

"It has always been our intention," Tugwell said, "to have the resettlement work a function of the Department of Agriculture. It obviously is a part of agricultural adjustment, and it has to do almost exclusively with farmers.

"We have been studying the proposed Bankhead-Jones farm tenant bill, which was designed to enable tenants to become land owners. We find that we can do in a small way what this bill intends. What we will do will come under the classification of our resettlement and rehabilitation work."

North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and the area embracing the point where boundaries of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana touch have been designated for the selection of specific sections for the tenant trial.

Plans Outlined.

The plan calls for the Administration to buy land and resell it to the tenants under a long-term agreement, up to 40 years. In some cases, permitting tenants to buy the land they now are cultivating. In others, they might be given an opportunity to move to some nearby farm.

Objections have been made to the Bankhead-Jones plan, it was said, on grounds that tenants would be saddled with a long-time debt. This measure would set up a $50,000,000 fund for long-term loans to finance farm purchases by tenants.

"A careful investigation has shown," Tugwell said concerning this point, "that the interest the tenant now pays as a tenant to finance a crop would be sufficient to repay both the Government loan and the interest."

Roosevelt Cuts '36-7 Estimates By 400 Million

Slashes Department Funds but Won't Compare Total With '35-6.

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 26.—President Roosevelt announced today a reduction of $400,000,000 so far in the estimates of Government departments for next year's expenditures.

With the budget for 1936 almost completed for the regular departments, Mr. Roosevelt refrained from any comparison of totals with this year's expenditures.

He also stated he had not discussed with Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee the latter's prediction the deficit for next year could be pared to $500,000,000. Representative Buchanan left today.

Driving his car back from the swimming pool on the way to lunch, the President kept his regular semi-weekly press conference, stopping in front of Georgia Hall at the Warm Springs Foundation.

Seated with him in the front seat was silent Secretary Morgenthau. Aubrey Williams, head of the national youth movement, got into the back seat of the open car with Gus Gennerich, personal bodyguard to the President.

Asked about the report from Secretary Ickes charging collusion on steel bids for public works projects, he reiterated these charges are automatically referred to the Federal Trade Commission.

Regarding a suggestion to prevent the sale of motor cars which can travel more than 50 miles an hour, Mr. Roosevelt said Representative Buchanan had mentioned it, but offhand he personally doubted the constitutionality of such legislation.

In good spirits and apparent excellent health, he exchanged banter with newspapermen in between serious talk. He declined a suggestion to give Government employes a Wednesday half-holiday before Thanksgiving.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had written a reply to Gov. Talmadge of Georgia in response to his written formal greeting. Asked about the address at the welcome-home celebration arranged for him at Atlanta on Friday, he said he had written two pages of his talk last night, but had put them away for another start later.

Mrs. Roosevelt is coming here late tomorrow for Thanksgiving Day. James Roosevelt, eldest son, is expected during the day.

Tonight Mr. Roosevelt motored to the playhouse here to witness a play by patients of the foundation, an institution for the treatment of the after-affects of infantile paralysis. The play was entitled "The Old Maid's Dilemma."

Steel, Iron Makers Reject Parley Bid

Industry Feels New NRA Would Hamper Trade.

The American Iron and Steel Institute yesterday added its name to the list of large industrial organizations refusing to participate in the conference of industry called by George Berry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation.

Walter S. Tower, secretary of the Institute, was quoted in an Associated Press dispatch from New York as saying that steel makers felt recovery "would be hampered rather than helped by any further legislation designed to regiment business enterprise."

Commenting on the action of the institute, Berry said:

"I regret that this part of the steel industry of the United States is unwilling to discuss matters vitally affecting industry as a whole. I am comforted, however, by the fact that a large number of manufacturers in the iron and steel industry will be present, not as representatives of the American Iron and Steel Institute."

Eddie Killeen's Rites Attract Curious Crowd

They carried "The Chief" to his grave yesterday.

Eddie Killeen, who lived the life of a "boss racketeer" and died with a bullet in his back, was accorded a typical gambler's funeral—family wishes notwithstanding.

Tenderly they lifted the body of Eddie Killeen—slain by the hand of a woman he trusted—and carried his $1,000 copper coffin under leaden skies to "merciful peace" in old Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Dolefully, strains from a hidden pipe organ echoed through the open door of W. W. Chambers' funeral chapel, as hundreds of curious people jostled and shoved to watch Washington's erstwhile "racket" baron begin his last ride.

But at the hillside burial plot in Mount Olivet only a handful of outsiders stood with grieving relatives beside a canopied grave as newspaper photographers recorded the final chapter of Kulleen's hectic career.

Services in Chapel.

Services were simple in the tiny funeral chapel. Less than 75 close friends, "pals" and relatives were there. The curious were not admitted and only two reporters succeeded in gaining entrance.

Eddie, clad in a tuxedo with a rosary in his hand, lay amid floral tributes banked to the ceiling. It was evident that "the boys" had not forgotten their chieftain in death.

There was no mass, just a prayer and a few brief words from the Rev. Cornelius J. Dacey, rector of St. Paul's Catholic Church.

"Oh Lord," intoned Father Dacey, "we pray thee that he may not receive punishment for his misdeeds. Be merciful in Thy judgment, oh Lord."

Softly the organ played "Nearer My God to Thee." A sister knelt beside the casket. She was supported by her brother.

"Oh, Eddie, Eddie," sobbed the sister, "why did it have to happen?"

Several times she was assisted to her dead brother's side from a private room where the mourning family sat. Just before Father Dacey opened the services, she was forcibly taken back to her seat.

Estranged Wife Present.

Mrs. Florence Killeen, the slain gambler's estranged wife, stood quietly beside the coffin for a moment. Then she turned, sobbing, and buried her face in a handkerchief. Killeen had deserted her for "another woman," but not once did she show a trace of bitterness.

There was another sister, who also knelt for many minutes, gazing at the body and wiping her eyes; a third sister, and a nephew, John F. Costello. All were sobbing bitterly as they turned from the coffin.

But the mourners were not confined to members of the immediate family. Men—big men, hard men, men who looked and acted out of place in the flower-scented room—wept openly and unashamed.

Eddie had friends. And to show him they were still his friends, they came many miles—Philadelphia, Baltimore, New York—to pay a final tribute.

Floral wreaths also attested to Eddie's large and varied following. There was a card signed: "The Boys." Another reading: "From a Pal."

Detectives Present.

A magnificent spray of yellow chrysanthemums and red roses came from James A. ("Jimmie") LaFontaine, proprietor of the white frame gambling house known as "Jimmie's place."

And there was another tribute from Sam Beard, who turned his "affairs" over to Eddie and served a term in jail. Neither LaFontaine nor Beard attended the funeral, but Mrs. Beard sat quietly with the family.

Wife Leaves Funeral Home

Post Staff Photo.

MRS. FLORENCE KILLEEN, widow of slain Eddie Killeen, sobbed at his funeral yesterday, forgetting the bitterness that led to her separation from the man who was often accused of being Washington's leading gambler and who finally was killed after a quarrel with another woman.

Mrs. McDonald Will Be Buried This Afternoon

Burial to Be in Congressional Cemetery; Rites Set For 2 O'Clock.

Mrs. Josephine C. McDonald, next to the last survivor of a family whose members were among the earliest Washingtonians, will be buried today in Congressional Cemetery. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. in the Wright Funeral Home at 1337 Tenth street northeast.

Mrs. McDonald's husband was the late Lieut. William J. McDonald, an officer in the Marine Corps and employed for many years in the Pension Office. His father, grandfather and brother were chief clerks of the Senate.

Until her death Monday, in her home at 1661 Crescent place northwest, there were only two persons in Washington bearing the family name. The other is her only survivor, a daughter, Miss Madge McDonald.

Mrs. McDonald was in her 78th year. On Tuesday and Friday of last week she suffered paralytic strokes. She was born in Brooklyn on May 22, 1858, and married Lieut. McDonald in 1878. She had lived in Washington since. Lieut. McDonald died in 1915.

Mrs. McDonald's grandfather-in-law, John G. McDonald, was clerk of the Senate during the War with England in 1812. When the British burned the Capitol he rescued the Senate's most valuable archives, carrying them to Rock Creek Park, where they were buried and later unearthed to become the only Senate records of the period available.

Mrs. McDonald was widely known in Washington. She was one of the founders and charter members of the Twentieth Century Club. She resigned from the organization several years ago and was made an honorary member.

Bryant Burial Set for Today At Arlington

Former Comrades to Attend Funeral of Pioneer Navy Dentist.

Funeral services for Commander Emory Addison Bryant, co-organizer of the Naval Dental Corps, will be held at 11 a. m. today with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

The honorary pallbearers will be Lieut. Comdr. William N. Cogan, retired, and Commanders Harry E. Harvey, Joseph Mahoney, John Barber, John McAlpin and Leon Frost, all of the Naval Dental Corps.

Commander Bryant died on Monday at the Naval Hospital following a brief illness. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emory Addison Bryant; a son, George E. Bryant, and two daughters, Mrs. Florence Mackenzie and Mrs. Pierre Chamberlain.

The veteran naval officer was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., August 10, 1863. Graduated from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery in the class of 1886, he practiced dentistry in this city for many years.

Later he turned to the study of law, completing courses at George Washington University and at the National University. His specialty was patent law.

In October, 1912, he was appointed to the Navy and with Lieut. Comdr. William N. Cogan, U. S. N., retired, now the dean of the Georgetown University School of Dentistry, he organized the Dental Corps of the United States Navy.

Commander Bryant served in various ships and stations of the Navy until 1929, when he was retired on account of age limitations. Recently he had served as chairman of the legislative committee of the Forest Hills Citizens Association, taking an active part in civic affairs until the time of his illness.

New Deal Acts To Free Youths Of Dole's Yoke

District, Maryland, Virginia, West Va. to Share $10,000,000 Grant.

By the United Press.

The New Deal last night launched a $10,000,000 program to start making almost 2,000,000 needy youths independent of Federal doles.

The National Youth Administration announced the money, made available by Comptroller General John R. McCarl, would go: $6,000,000 for youth community development and recreational leadership; $3,084,000 for rural youth development; $1,324,000 for public service training projects; $902,000 for research projects.

The allotment augmented a $27,000,000 grant made by President Roosevelt early in the $4,000,000,000 work-relief program to give Federal financial assistance to 300,000 needy students attending high schools, colleges and graduate schools all over the country.

The $10,000,000 was divided among the 48 States and the District of Columbia for State NYA directors to use to create employment for the 2,875,000 needy between 16 and 25 years, that Director Aubrey W. Williams estimated were on Federal relief rolls as of last May.

The State allocations included: District of Columbia, $24,000; Maryland, $83,000; Virginia, $131,500, and West Virginia, $251,500.

Rehabilitation of the needy youths will consist of giving them work as community playground directors in cities and rural sections, placing them with State, county and local governments for apprenticeship in civil service and employing them on research projects.

NYA originally was scheduled to receive $50,000,000, but officials have no definite plans for spending the balance.

Lij Yassu, Once 'King of Kings,' Dies in Chains He Bore 10 Years

Former Ruler of Ethiopia Succumbs at 39 in Mountain Jail, Where He Was Thrown After Defeat by Selassie, in Struggle for Kingdom.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 26.—Lij Yassu, deposed as Emperor of Ethiopia in 1916, died yesterday in the chains he wore for a decade as a prisoner of Haile Selassie.

Since 1926, Lij Yassu, 39, was confined in Gara Muleta Mountain fortress, regarded as impregnable, chained day and night to a guard whose own life was forfeit should the prisoner escape.

The government announced Lij Yassu's death today—the end of a definite threat to Emperor Haile Selassie. The end came from paralysis culminating a serious illness of three years, brought on by Lij Yassu's vices, it was stated. Efforts of foreign physicians to save his life were unavailing, the announcement said.

For many years after his deposition, Lij Yassu was imprisoned in castles with retinues of servants and the finest of food and clothes, but always chained to his keepers.

Italian "Chance" Fades.

With Lij Yassu died any Italian hope that he, as claimant to the Ethiopian throne, might be put back into power as an Italian puppet, if Haile Selassie is decisively defeated. It has been a matter of speculation since the war began whether Lij Yassu might be useful to the invaders, who have sought to capitalize Ras Gugsa, pop-eyed little widower of Haile Selassie's daughter, who deserted to the Italians.

The ill-fated public career of Lij Yassu began in 1913 at the death of Emperor Menelik, the empire builder. It was Menelik who fought off efforts of foreign powers to seize Ethiopia and organized the warring semi-independent kingdoms into a united Ethiopia. Long before he died, Menelik chose Lij Yassu as his heir, to rule under the regency of Ras Tessama.

But when Menelik died, chaos followed. Empress Taitu, Menelik's widow, and tribal chiefs among themselves. The Empress died in 1910 and Ras Tessama a year later. Lij Yassu then seized the throne.

Strayed From Church.

At once, according to historical records, he became tyrannical and dissolute. Worse still, from the standpoint of the Coptic Ethiopians, he began to lean toward Mohammedanism.

He supported the Mad Mullah of Somaliland in an effort to form a league of Moslem states and promptly was excommunicated by the head of the Ethiopian church. Released from fealty to Lij Yassu by this act of the Abuna, the chiefs revolted and deposed him. They proclaimed Zauditu, daughter of Menelik, Empress, with Ras Tafari (the present Emperor) as regent.

Ras Tafari raised an army and almost annihilated the forces of Lij Yassu, gaining control of the war-torn country. In 1926, shortly after this battle, Zauditu retired in favor of Ras Tafari. He was made King of Ethiopia in 1928, and after Zauditu died in 1930, Ras Tafari was crowned Emperor of Ethiopia, King of Kings, under the name of Haile Selassie.

U. S. Plans to Appeal On Cutten Decision

By the Associated Press.

Agriculture Department officials planned yesterday to appeal to the Supreme Court in their effort to bar Arthur W. Cutten, millionaire grain speculator, from the trading pits for two years.

They also indicated they would seek to have Congress amend a section of the grain futures act under which a Federal circuit court of appeals reversed on Monday a Government suspension, order issued last March.

In suspending Cutten, the Grain Futures Administration, headed by Secretary Wallace, charged him with concealing big market deals to manipulate wheat prices in 1930 and 1931.

Jurors Return 4 Indictments In Murder Case

2 Are Charged as Brooklyn Slaying Is Re-opened After Scandal.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 26.—Four indictments were returned today in the reopened investigation into the killing of Samuel Druckman, a case that became a major issue in the recent municipal election.

Only two of the true bills were made public. They charged Morris Luckman, 50, and his cousin, Meyer Luckman, 58, with first-degree murder. Both were in custody when the indictments were returned.

Failure of a previous grand jury to return indictments led to a campaign charge by Joseph D. McGoldrick, unsuccessful candidate for Kings County district attorney, that "murder is safe in Brooklyn."

In receiving the second grand jury's findings today, County Judge George W. Martin directed it to remain in session until December 16, to inquire into reports of "bribery and laxity of duty on the part of public officials."

The indictment came on the eve of conferences of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman with District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan, and Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine. The Governor has asked the two officials to tell him what they know about the case and "all alleged crimes" connected with it.

Morris Luckman is a new figure in the case. He is the alleged owner of the automobile in which Druckman's beaten and strangled body was found last March 3. He gave his address as Paterson, N. J., and his cousin, Meyer, gave a Brooklyn addres. Both pleaded not guilty and were remanded for trial.

Aged Child Slayer May Escape Penalty

Baby's Body Never Found In Vlemminck Case.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Nov. 26.—Alphonse Vlemminck, elderly Belgian who confessed yesterday he killed the infant son of William C. Greatrex 12 years ago and threw the body into Detroit River, may escape punishment for the crime, Wayne County authorities said today.

Vlemminck now is under a 12-to-15-year sentence for another crime—an offense against a 4-year-old child—but he is to be questioned further about the Greatrex case before he is taken to the State penitentiary.

Sheriff Henry Behrendt, who obtained the signed confession, and Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said they doubted that anything could be done in the Greatrex case against Vlemminck because the baby's body has not been recovered.

Vlemminck related to Behrendt Monday that the Greatrex baby, given him by mistake when he called at the hospital in 1923 for the son born at about the same time to his 19-year-old unmarried daughter, had died of suffocation while wrapped tightly in his coat as he drove around deciding how to get rid of it.

Ex-Traitor to Selassie Plunges Over Precipice

Dessye, via Courier to Addis Ababa, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Overjoyed by being restored in the favor of Emperor Haile Selassie, who elevated him to the governorship of Warra Hailu Province, Dejazmatch Gugsa Ali, one-time traitor, accidentally stepped off a precipice Sunday night and was killed instantly.

Gugsa Ali had been in disgrace since 1932, when he conspired against the crown while governor of Wore Babo Province. He was removed from office, but three years' repentance won him recognition as a loyal subject again.

Key to 9 Deaths Can't Give Clews

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Officers are shown trying to get Chester Comer, 25-year-old slayer of three and suspected in the deaths of six others, to write clews leading to findings of the bodies. Comer, in Oklahoma City hospital yesterday, grasped paper and pencil but failed to write.

Transfusion Is Given Slayer In Effort to Bare New Clews

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 26.—New blood pumped into the veins of a gravely wounded suspect gave hope tonight to officiers seeking to wring from him clews to the fate of nine vanished persons.

If the transfusion has the desired effect, physicians believe Chester Comer—25-year-old confessed slayer of three of the nine—may talk.

If it doeshn't, Comer may die from a bullet sent into his brain by a small-town marshal, with the location of the well-hidden bodies still baffling hundreds of searchers.

As the officers gathered in a hushed knot awaiting a signal from physicians to again fire questions at Comer, the belief was expressed he may have piled bodies of five of the missing persons into one lonely grave.

Snatched phrases muttered by the suspect were repeated:

"Lots of bodies . . . oh, piles of bodies . . . "were the phrases officers said persistently forced themselves into their minds.

The five bodies officers fear may be piled together are those of Ray Evans, Shawnee civic leader; L. A. Simpson, Piedmont farmer; Simpson's son, Warren, 14, and Comer's first and second wives, Elizabeth Childers Comer and Lucille Stevens Comer.

"They are all dead," said Col. Charles W. Daley, State crime bureau superintendent. "There's no question about it. The baffling thing to us is the fact not one body has been found, even though hundreds have searched every conceivable place."

Circumstances identical with those in the Oklahoma disappearances led officers to link Comer with deaths of four tourists missing at Albuquerque, N. M. They are George M. Lorius, Albert A. Heberer and their wives, of East St. Louis, Ill.

The description of a youth sought in the New Mexico mystery tallies with that of Comer, except Comer has no tattoo on his left arm.

Officers said those who describe the youth might have mistaken a splotch for a tatto.

As the officers kept their vigil near Comer, at least 1,000 weary searchers sloshed through rain and mud in search of the five bodies believed to be in a relatively small south central Oklahoma area.

Criminologist Aids in Search For Girl's Killer

Public Feeling Flares at Fresno, Calif. Citizens Join in Hunt.

By the Associated Press.

Fresno, Calif., Nov. 26.—Science joined police and angry citizens today in a hunt for the slayer of Mary Louise Stammer, 14, pretty daughter of a prominent Fresno attorney.

E. O. Heinrich, noted criminologist, examined the Stammer home where the girl was shot and stripped of most of her clothing Sunday night.

Police-trained dogs trailed the killer about a mile to where the assailant presumably got into an automobile and sped away.

District Attorney Dan A. Conway said he was considering a theory the girl was slain by some young man madly in love with her—one acquainted with the house and the habits of the family.

Conway said someone telephoned his office last night, asked if the girl's slayer had been caught and "laughed diabolically" on receiving a negative answer.

Lynch talk bobbed up in some quarters as public feeling flared high.

Heinrich declined to say what clews he had found. An autopsy showed a .22-caliber bullet wound in the back of the head caused Miss Stammer's death.

The killer crept up to the home while Miss Stammer was alone, except for two small children sleeping upstairs. The girl was sitting in a chair by a large window.

Investigators said he had a clear view of his victim when he fired.

Apparently he then smashed a glass rear door, dragged the dying girl upstairs and tore away her clothing.

The girl's mother returned home about that time and the killer apparently was frightened away.

A trail of bloody fingerprints beginning at the rear door confronted investigators.

U. S. Confiscates Gold Youth 'Manufactured'

Denver, Colo., Nov. 26 (AP).—The gold William H. Hendrick, young Chicago chemist, told mint officials he "manufactured" was confiscated by the Government today as shavings from old coins. Hendrick turned 5.04 ounces of gold in at the mint here last December 3 and months later rode a bicycle all the way from Chicago to tell mint officials, they said, that he had discovered the secret of making gold from its "subatomic constituents."

He refused to divulge the secret and rode away. The Government, contending the metal had been scraped from gold coins, started confiscation proceedings and won possession of the gold today when Hendrick failed to appear at a hearing.

Court Upholds Right of Owner To Burn Home

Judge Rules Virginian May Destroy Property Unless Injury Is Involved.

A Virginian may burn his own house or property if he has no malicious intent to injure anyone, Judge Walter T. McCarthy held yesterday in the Circuit Court of Fairfax County, Va.

This ruling brought an abrupt end to the trial of two colored women under indictment on arson charges. They are L. Louise Carpenter and her daughter, Mary Lucy Carpenter, both charged with burning their dwelling at Herndon last spring.

The mother was tried Monday on a charge of having her daughter burn the house in an effort to defraud an insurance company. She was acquitted because of meager prosecution evidence. An alleged confession by the daughter was not admitted.

The daughter was tried yesterday on charges of firing the building. She was aquitted when the State failed to show any malicious intent or an attempt to defraud anyone by the destruction of the building.

Another indictment against the mother was dismissed by Judge McCarthy because it did not charge a crime.

Prior to the trial attorneys representing the two colored women claimed that colored persons were not represented on jury lists in proportion to their percentage of the county's population. There were three Negroes on the jury selected to hear the cases.

The Christmas Seals.

Thirty-one years ago a Danish postmaster first conceived the plan of selling penny stamps at Christmas time to finance the war against tuberculosis. Today 40 nations, all members of the International Tuberculosis Union, with headquarters in Paris, participate in the sale. In the United States, the gay little stickers first appeared in Delaware in 1907. Since then, some 2,000 State and local organizations have come to cooperate in the work. As a result, more than 700 tuberculosis hospitals are able today to offer beds to 70,000 sufferers and thousands of clinics can provide free diagnosis and nursing.

More significant, the death rate generally from the white plague is dropping. In 1918 according to records from the registration areas in the United States, the rate was 202 per 100,000. Today it is 60 per 100,000. Unfortunately, however, the Nation's Capital city must report the second highest tuberculosis death rate in the country.

The District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association is dedicated to the improvement of this deplorable local record. Not being a member of the Community Chest, it must depend on individual donations and the proceeds from the sale of Christmas seals for funds. The seals go on sale tomorrow. Buy your share!

The money will provide for examinations, for nursing care, for research work and for the promotion of legislation to allow more adequate hospital facilities. This means care for your tuberculous neighbors, particularly the children, which in turn means greater protection for the rest of Washington and Washington's children from the communicable disease. Few investments offer such certain and sizable dividends.

Of Limited Significance.

Since the Supreme Court upset the NRA, the country has become somewhat oversensitive to court decisions. Any lower court judge who rules positively upon a New Deal measure can be certain of making the headlines. And even the less significant rulings of the Supreme Court are scanned closely for possible implications as to later opinions on vital legislation. In this atmosphere the public is likely to become confused as to what is really happening.

The temporary injunction granted by the Supreme Court, restraining the collection of processing taxes from eight Louisiana rice millers, is not, of course, devoid of significance. But it gives no indication whatever as to the attitude the court may take on the constitutionality of the processing taxes. It would be a great mistake, therefore, to assume that the New Deal has suffered another set-back from the courts, or that the forces fighting the AAA have won a notable victory.

Ordinarily taxes must be paid into the Treasury, regardless of disputes. Adjustments can then be made after controversies have been fully adjudicated in the courts. Exceptions to this rule are seldom granted. But in this case it was argued that the mill owners would have no remedy once the taxes were paid, because refunds are barred under any circumstances unless the taxpayer can prove that this levy was not passed on to the consumer. A majority of the justices agreed that there is a question as to whether the millers would have an adequate remedy if the act should be declared unconstitutional. That question will be settled after the court has heard arguments next month. But the much broader issue of the constitutionality of the processing taxes will remain for decision in the Hoosac Mills case.

The AAA has done well to clarify the issue at stake in this case, yet its bland assumption that farm benefits will continue to be paid regardless of what the court decides, introduces a new element of confusion into the situation. To cut off the processing taxes and draw agricultural subsidies directly from the Treasury might create a more serious situation than a sweeping annihilation of the AAA. Under present conditions there is probably only one levy that could replace the processing taxes, and that is a general sales tax. Yet, since the processing taxes are in reality only sales taxes on food and clothing, it seems probable that constitutional objections against one form of sales tax would be equally applicable to another, if applied for the same purpose.

There can be no assurance, therefore, that farm benefits will continue. Presumably the court will soon pass upon the constitutionality of the entire adjustment act. At this time probably not even the justices themselves know what their decision then will be. It is all very well for the AAA to prepare for any eventuality, but attempts to anticipate what the court will decide may easily give the farmer a false sense of security.

China Must Prove Her Unity.

Japan is obviously meeting stormy weather in her thinly-veiled efforts to turn the northern provinces of China proper into another Manchukuo.

Last week Gen. Doihara, whose function is apparently to undermine Chinese unity from within, got ahead of schedule in the project and lost face in a manner pretty painful for a Japanese war lord. Over the week-end one Gen. Yin Ju-Keng attempted a more modest coup in Hopei province, but that too seems to have petered out, regardless of the yen which may have been made available to Yin. Now, if there is one social break the Japanese dislike it is bungling in extending their influence on the continent of Asia. Which explains why plenty of irritation is now apparent in Tokyo.

The British, whose energies do not seem to be wholly absorbed by Mussolini, are accused by the Japanese of being the villain in the piece, and probably with a certain amount of justification. The Tokyo foreign office formally charges the British government with hampering its "conciliatory policy" toward China, thus throwing into bold relief a certain lack of humor occasionally associated with the sturdy Nipponese. The British, who are shrewd enough to see that Japan is likely to conciliate China out of existence as an independent nation, are undoubtedly working quietly to stiffen Chinese resistance. And other nations interested in the open-door policy are not likely to resent the co-operation which Sir Frederick Leith-Ross is giving to Nanking.

But the major strength of the Nanking government, if it is to maintain its authority over Peiping, Tientsin and the rich provinces which Japan now openly covets, must lie in its own resistance to the pressure which Tokyo is exerting. Heretofore it has been all too difficult for anyone else to help China, simply because China has shown so little disposition to help herself. There has been far too much justification for the Japanese contention, made to the League of Nations during the Manchurian dispute, that China is not entitled to the protection of the League Covenant because "there is no unified control in China and no authority which is entitled to claim entire control."

Japan's present tactics of assisting separatist movements, and working through venal Chinese generals, are obviously intended to substantiate the assumption of national anarchy. If Chinese disintegration rather than Japanese aggression can be made the chief element in the picture, no external effort to invoke treaties guaranteeing the unwieldy republic's independence and territorial integrity need be expected.

But if China can prove her national unity in unmistakable terms the whole case underlying Japanese pressure will crumble. And it would then be possible to anticipate a more concerted assistance to a nation whose treaty rights would have substantial meaning because of its obvious will to self-preservation.

Recovery And Employment.

Current business indices testify uniformly to a pronounced improvement in industrial activity, no longer confined to factories manufacturing goods for consumption. The durable goods industries are also sharing in the advance and showing the greatest relative increases over last year.

Moreover the latest monthly bulletin of the Federal Reserve Board emphasizes the sustained activity of the present year, in contrast to previous rather feverish spurts which created false hopes of continued advance. The present outlook is reassuring not only because it marks a higher level of activity than at any time during the preceding four years, but because this activity is of a more comprehensive character.

The American Federation of Labor is equally emphatic concerning the significant gains that have been made. But, like the Reserve Board, it notes that jobs are not keeping pace with the advance in productive activity. According to the Reserve Board the total volume of employment is "slightly higher" than a year ago, but still considerably below the 1929 level. The Department of Labor estimate of 250,000 re-employed in October is encouraging, but must be measured against the long distance still to go before the unemployment problem is in hand.

Until recently it has been possible to minimize the gravity of the presence of nine or ten millions of idle workers by assuming that business recovery would provide jobs for most of them. The depressed state of the heavy industries was regarded as a major reason for failure to make much impression upon this reserve army of workers. But all these defenses are rapidly being taken away as the business analysts prove to us that rapid strides are being made without producing proportionate employment.

It is perturbing to be told that the Reserve Board's September index of industrial activity was 89 per cent of the 1923-25 average, and is probably higher by this time, when we know that the burden of relief needs remains as heavy as ever. Insistence that local communities finance this obligation to the limit of their ability, and abandonment of fantastic and wasteful forms of relief, will reduce the Federal financial burden. But it will not provide the additional jobs which must be found if business recovery is to be synonymous with national recovery.

New industries, new demands, larger purchasing power are required if the country is to offer working opportunities to all its employables, instead of achieving a limited and questionable prosperity that does not permit large numbers of able-bodied individuals to share in its benefits.

Revolt In Brazil.

The insurrection in Brazil adds another pessimistic note to the current outcrop of turmoil. Armies are on the march on four continents, with actual fighting in two of them. The hostilities in Brazil do not appear to represent a great upheaval, and yet they are in many ways typical of this turbulent age.

In his appeal for the application of martial law, President Vargas told the Brazilian Congress that the revolt had been inspired by radicals aiming "to disrupt by violence the political and social order, changing the form of government established by the constitution and implanting a radical regime." This explanation coincides with reports that the trouble grew out of the dissolution recently of the National Liberators Alliance, said to sponsor a communistic program. Apparently a widespread revolt was contemplated, but poor organization has resulted in sporadic outbursts that offer no formidable threat to the government.

There is a natural inclination to discount the responsibility of the Reds in stirring up this insurrection, because that excuse for social upheavals has been so flagrantly overworked in the past. Nevertheless, it is no secret that the Communists have been active in Brazil. Possibly President Vargas' own successful revolution five years ago encouraged them to believe that the feat could be repeated in favor of a dictatorship of the proletariat.

It is evident, however, that the existing government has the support of the country in adopting drastic measures to restore peace and order. A state of siege and suspension of various constitutional liberties was overwhelmingly approved by both the Senate and Chamber. Sao Paulo, where a serious revolt broke out in 1932, is reported quiet. As the effort to suppress the uprising continues, the attitude of Sao Paulo will afford a good test of the federal government's strength.

Brazil has not been free from unrest since the revolution of five years ago. Yet during that period conditions have been substantially improved. President Vargas has placed the country's finances on a more stable basis, has sought to bring a measure of social security for wage earners, and is endeavoring to rule by constitutional means. There is no evidence that violent overthrow of his regime would be anything but unfortunate for the Brazilian people.

Useless But Satisfying.

While the world waits anxiously for news from the Antarctic of Lincoln Ellsworth, and much less hopefully for word of Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, the discovery of the body of a young white man in the Matto Grosso of central Brazil recalls the unsolved mystery of the disappearance of an even more glamorous explorer.

Lieut. Col. J. H. Fawcett, D. S. O., set out in 1925 with his son, Jack, and another young Englishman to penetrate the unexplored Brazilian plateau, in the region between the Araguaya and the Xingu Rivers. They did not use modern methods or seek to advance modern scientific knowledge. The three took only such equipment as they could carry on the march, and hoped to discover "amazing ruins of ancient cities—ruins incomparably older than those in Egypt." They steered by no dashboard instruments, but followed a will-o'-the-wisp held out by a lost Portuguese explorer, whose report to the viceroy had been neglected in the Brazilian archives since 1743.

Such an enterprise satisfies our taste for romance as can no utilitarian expedition, whatever its dangers or its accomplishments. There is an inherent appeal, as Stevenson pointed out, in events and places, a romantic appeal which Stevenson's prose did much to enhance. Fawcett's last message from Dead Horse Camp, the description in Portuguese archives of lost Brazilian tribes of black-haired white men—these are details which writers of the Rider Haggard school have trained us to appreciate.

Our judgment of reality is prejudiced by our taste in fiction and it will probably take strong and protracted doses of realistic literature to eradicate this pleasant weakness.

"More people believe in hell now than did seven years ago," declares an evangelist. And no wonder! There's so much more hell to believe in now than there was seven years ago.

"In its infant stages of development the world was in fog," declares a scientist. Signs of the times would indicate that we're well advanced into our second childhood.

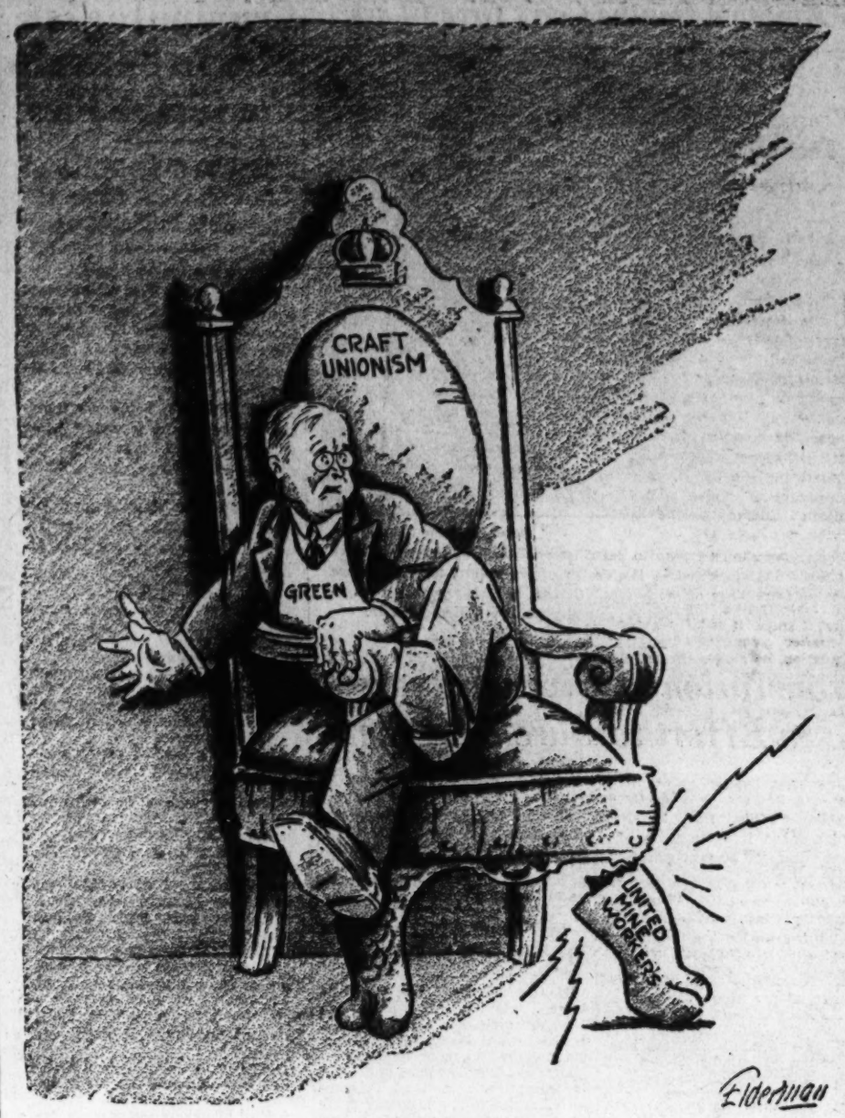
Military Training.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

Insistence on compulsory military training in many American schools has been hard to understand. Parents and no doubt some students have been confused as to the origin of the compulsion, believing it to lie with the War Department, or in Government grants to colleges, whereas it seems to lie actually with the directorates of the colleges themselves. In 1924 the Secretary of War wrote to a correspondent:

> So far as the War Department is concerned, it is optional with the authorities of the school, college or university whether military training shall be an elective or a compulsory course in the curriculum.

Compulsory military training thus exists in many colleges apparently because the administrators of those schools find in it some special advantage to the school which maintains it, although it is of doubtful advantage to many students and, indeed, even to the military units which it is supposed to support.



Unstable Throne.

Letters To The Editor.

Pupils' Oaths.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Children have unformed, plastic minds; they are sent to school to have their minds and morals shaped according to American standards. They should be instructed in our constitutional form of government and taught respect for that Government which has made this Nation the greatest on earth. Not only have our public schools been invaded by men and women holding subversive ideas and desiring to inculcate disloyalty in the immature minds of the pupils, but colleges and universities all over the United States have had the same virus injected into their teaching force.

A public school is not a hodge-podge assembly of people who hold their positions by right; it is an organized system, with recognized American standards; a place where our children may receive instruction in morals and in the fundamentals on which the lives of great men and women are built. When parents patronize such schools they have a right to know into what shape the mind and character of their children is being molded. The school superintendent and board of education should stand for certain ideals and all teachers should be imbued with these same ideas or they should not be employed.

In the recent investigation by the citizens' associations, it developed that neither the superintendent nor the board of education knew what books were being used in the schools. Who determines what textbooks shall be used in the schools of the District? Who are the authors of the books "explaining" communism? Who selected the supplementary reading matter for the children? Any child reading the books on communism as suggested would have no time to read anything about our history or our form of government.

I wish to thank Alexander Sidney Lanier for his timely letter in The Post of the 18th, and Gen. Fries and the citizens' associations for the excellent work they are doing in uncovering disloyalty to our Government. I heartily agree that the entire school system of the District needs overhauling and extensive weeding.

The teacher molds the opinions of the pupils. This explains why the subversive elements now operating in this country are boring into our school system. This is America, and every teacher, every employe connected with the schools, yea, every pupil desiring to attend the schools, should be required to take the oath of allegiance to our Constitution; failure to take such oath should automatically bar the disloyal person from attendance or from employment in the school system. MARIE GRAVES BONHAM.

Turnabout.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Yesterday morning, at Fourteenth and Irving streets, I wistnessed an interesting happening:

A gentleman who I know very well was standing on the corner waiting for traffic to clear. He has excellent eyesight, but the sun was shining brightly and he had donned a pair of blue spectacles. While thus standing on the curb an elderly colored mammy took him by the arm, thinking him blind, and undertook to pilot him across the street. Did he refuse the proffered service? He did not! He permitted the old mammy to take his arm, assumed the faltering steps of the blind and, when safely across raised his hat in thanks to his supposed benefactress.

Result: She felt she had done a good turn and was happy: He had done her a good turn in making her believe she had done so and everyone was happy. Truly this exemplifies the reverse of the adage: "'Tis more gracious to give than to receive." This would surely be a better old world if the principle exemplified were more widely practiced. JAMES A PURCELL.
Washington, Nov. 20.

Listen To The Hissing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the United States is still a Republic, and as the papers are still publishing the flings of the people at various issues of the day, may I have my fling?

"Teaching" communism in the schools is one of the vital issues. Among those who would merely "laugh it off," few sign their names. Usually, these persons refer to real Americans as "afraid" of this or that. But they "fear" to sign their names, and thus put themselves beneath consideration.

This morning a gentleman, unafraid, contributes a "humorous" idea. "A Fries Investigation?" He has, unintentionally, I think, in one sentence, summed up the entire situation. He says: "From what little I know of Gen. Fries and his activities he seems utterly opposed to everything which I believe to be my rights as a citizen under the Constitution." It is because of this "little" that people "know" about the cobra, communism, that has already lifted its head and hood over our country, that we should awaken to the danger.

That magnificent American, Gen. Fries, is one of the watchmen who is sounding the alarm. He has studied this lesson, and is thoroughly qualified to "teach." Learn of him. In true American style we are preparing to give thanks to Almighty God for his innumerable benefits. But, if we do not stop and listen to the hissing and realize just what certain destruction is creeping around us, we will soon have nothing about which to be "thankful."

The question now is: Who is on the Lord's side? We know the communists are not. Take your stand on the Constitution.
MARIE J. ANDRUS.

Better Business.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the price of meats began soaring, the Secretary of Agriculture advised people to eat fish. I asked a fish peddler why he was loafing. He said the colored women said they could not afford fish because the price of lard had got beyond them.

Recently when the price of bread was advanced, the Secretary said that should not have been done; that the bakeries should have cut the size of the loaf.

The Better Business Bureau should grant the Secretary an honorary membership gratis. C. D.
Washington, Nov. 26.

Whither And When?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For six years, at about this season of the year, I have tried to find some encouragement to believe the incoming year would be an improvement over the one just passing, but my optimism in each instance has been smashed to the earth and today I can't find one atom of my former enthusiasm which drove me along in believing we would soon be on top again. We would greatly welcome a kindly voice giving fatherly advice as to "where we go from here" and when he thinks we may get started! W. C. PARDUE.
Dallas, Tex., Nov. 23.

On Arming Mexican Teachers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read in The Post of November 22 the news that the National Government of Mexico is arming socialist teachers against their opponents in the state of Puebla. The assassination of six socialist teachers in the vicinity of the mountain village of Tezrutlan is alleged as the reason why the government has taken this action. Reporting this crime the correspondent of El Universal under date of November 15 says that the assassinations were committed in remote mountain villages by persons unknown to the authorities, and that as soon as the facts became known the civilian population organized a search for the criminals assisted by the armed forces of the state. The crime seems to have been a true massacre committed by a mob of "fanatical indigenes" as El Universal reports it.

This is not the first time in recent Mexican history that the party in power has armed one group of Mexicans against another as an instrument of party politics. The practice has always led to disaster.

The case for the action of the government is not strengthened by dragging in the wornout contention that there is religious liberty in Mexico. That contention is absolutely at variance with known facts. The recent report of the American committee on religious rights and minorities may be cited to show how utterly false this contention is.

The day on which this crime was committed, Emilio Portes Gil, president of the National Revolutionary Party, boasting of the new strength which his party derived from the turning over to it of the direction of the socialist program of the national government, defied anyone to organize in opposition and gave revolutionists notice that any man joining an opposition party would forfeit his standing as a revolutionist no matter how important his services to his country may have been.

The fact that the so-called socialist educational program in Mexico has been handed over to the National Revolutionary Party shows clearly that the National Revolutionary Party is not willing to trust the constitutional agencies of government. Not the National Legislature, but the political party is master in Mexico and this by the very act of the government itself. Under such a political tyranny, which purposely excludes the voice of the people and makes patriotism synonymous with party affiliation, it is to be expected that in Mexico political opponents will be driven to acts of violence. The arming of a few socialist teachers is no remedy for the breakdown of both religious and political liberty that is becoming daily more apparent in all the outlying regions of Mexico.

The Post Impressionist

The Seats Of The Sanctions.

Post Office, Wednesday.

ONE of the most attentive students of this Column is the League of Nations. We long hoped it would be. We now know it is.

Some while since, the League undertook a little flicker in real-estate. Getting ready to move into its new palais, it prepared to vend its old hotel. And it advertised that venerable pile by a pamphlet milder than any auction-ad we ever read. We had some difficulty in discovering therefrom what was for sale; we haven't yet found out where to send our bid.

So we complained—in a Column. Delicately, but firmly, we indicated how such a pamphlet ought to be written.

Well, now the League has issued a pamphlet about its new building—though of course its new building isn't for sale—and this later pamphlet meets every requirement we mentioned. Therefore, you see, the League must have been swayed by our advice.

Not that the former Palais des Nations merited much. It was utterly unworthy of the ideal it housed. When you mentioned the League in the circle of one of the old Genevese families, the response ran: "It may be some good to the rest of the world, but it has robbed us of our best hotel." The truth, however, was that, when the League started work—filled by a laudable impatience of postponement—it took what came to hand. And the threadbare, one-elevator Hotel International was all Geneva offered—at a fairly steep figure, too. The sole fitting feature of the shack was its name.

No wonder other cities quartered the League Council shabbily when that long-suffering body forged afield! Those of us who were its camp-followers won't soon forget Lugano's deserted gambling-hell, where indignant Stresemann narrowly escaped apoplexy—the mother-eaten Senate Chamber of Madrid through which rolled the rumblings of approaching revolution—the gloomiest hall in all the gloomy French Foreign Office, where Japan was judged.

Nevertheless, its handicaps should have spurred a high-power sales-pamphleteer to greater encomiums. Whereas the pamphlet on the new international public-works' project——

But listen to it!

"As the common property of an association of peoples, the buildings are . . . an essentially co-operative achievement." That's what the new pamphlet says, and so say we:

In 1926 the League opened an international competition for plans for a proper palais. In 1927, from all over the world, 377 architects submitted 10,000 drawings. In 1928, the Council approved the joint plans of a Hungarian, a Swiss, an Italian and two Frenchmen. In 1929 the cornerstone was laid. Now, in 1935 (at a price of 8,000,000 gold francs—if there are such things) the Palais and its attendant Rockefeller Library approach completion—by workmen of ten nationalities and not yet one labor-dispute.

"It had to reflect the greatness of the idea through which it came to birth." That's the new pamphlet again, and again we applaud. It does reflect that idea:

The grounds cover "an area of 250,000 square meters." There is a vast lucky-horseshoe shaped Court of Honor. There are 400 offices for officials; there are press-rooms, clerical rooms, the Library (vols. 2,000,000). There are the Council Chamber and the Assembly Hall—both symbolically square.

Not least important, there is a restaurant. A restaurant: not a quick-lunch cellar like its predecessor, which wafted aloft the scent of friend sole, the perfume of pork-chops, to distract the nostrils of debating diplomats.

Nor should we neglect to compliment this author on his geographical knowledge. He has found out where the buildings are. And he frankly tells us.

This will prove a real relief to many Post readers. We ourselves have lately been puzzled upon the point. When we lent our presence to the cornerstone-laying, the site seemed to be a foothill of the Juras. But sportsman Pegler's recent article from Geneva placed the place on a foothill of the Alps. Our dizziness is dispelled when the pamphlet moves the League's seat back to where we left it, contemplating the eternal snows of serene Mont Blanc.

By a description worthy of the new buildings, our anonymous pamphleteer has convinced us that the new buildings are worthy of the League. We congratulate the League on possessing him, on possessing them—and on following the advice of the Post-Impressionist.

Mr. Bowers In Madrid.

Madrid, Nov. 26.

ONLY this afternoon your correspondent dropped in for a spot of something with His Excellency the American Ambassador to the Spanish Republic, Mr. Claude Bowers, who contented himself with a hitch of his thumb toward the decanter and syphon, "Don't mind me."

It was a strange experience for me to sit amid splendor in the mansion of the King's henchman, who had found it discreet to go away from Spain while the heat was on. In a few minutes the magnificence seemed to fade out as in the moving pictures and we were in the city room of the old New York World under the golden dome after the paper had gone to bed or in the littered local room in Indianapolis talking shop.

Was this a butler in the formal regimentals of his craft making elegant passes with his hands over a tray and offering muffins, or was it the office boy back from the "Quick-and-Dirty" on Nassau street with a can of coffee and hamburger on roll? And was this His Excellency the American Ambassador or a newspaper hand, Bowers of the old World?

NOW and again as shop talk drifted from one old story to another, remembering names of great reporters who had worked on them, something would catch your correspondent's eye and remind him that through this door on the left was a great art gallery and through that one over there a grand salon where official dinners are held. Your correspondent caught himself humming "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls." It wasn't like this back on the old World or in Indianapolis, and it wouldn't be like this in Madrid, either, but for the shrewd foresight of an old grandee who owns the premises and decided that in times of recurrent trouble in the land it would be a wise idea to have the American flag flying over his property. The rent, therefore, was modest and the difference had been charged off to insurance.

Possibly the owner of the place had been unduly apprehensive for the mob that howled around the palace the night of Alfonso's abdication, while the Queen and her children sat in their quarters awaiting anything, had been turned off by a simple notice fixed on the doors. It told them the palace was their own property and any damage they might inflict on same in a moment of republican emotion would be their own loss. So they contented themselves with howling until morning and then went home leaving intact the most luxurious palace in Europe.

MR. BOWERS is the second newspaperman to represent the United States in Madrid in recent years. The other was Mr. Alex Moore, Pittsburgh publisher, who left a deep impression if not permanent scars on the Spanish sense of propriety. Occasional reports which sifted back to the United States depicted him as a humorous, self-made American success who had endeared himself to the Spanish court by his unconventional ways, but he was more a clown than a scholar or diplomat, and the task of his successor still consists in part of living down Alex Moore.

When he died he left a legacy to the Queen, although she had plenty of money and his own employes back in Pittsburgh never had been notoriously overpaid. By this bequest he created after his death an impression among Americans that he had been a tremendous personal success with the lady and put the Spaniards in the position of having to decide whether it would cause more scandal to accept the gift than to reject it. The duties of the American Ambassador or minister have always been as much of a puzzle to the men themselves as to wayfaring Americans who happen by.

Old Walter Hines Page, who was known as Sir Walter in London, was the leader of the school of thought which holds that any traveling American is to be insulted at the front door and never allowed inside unless his family had been idle for at least three generations and he owned a home at Newport. It was Mr. Page's ambition in life to be as rude as a well-bred Englishman except to those whom he regarded as his social superiors. Whether he succeeded or not is still a matter of debate, but nobody can deny that he crowded his ideal and was in there trying to the day he died.

ON the other hand, there are always a great number of Americans on tour in the world, including some of the most poisonous bores on earth, who believe that an Ambassador's quarters are a sort of home away from home and feel snubbed if their diplomatic agent doesn't take them in town, get them drunk, get them pub-crawling through all the dives out of jail, cash their personal checks and date them up with the queen.

Possibly it's the preponderance of this latter kind of visitor which has put all American representatives abroad on the defensive and has given rise to the standardized exclamation when the door bell rings. "Hide, mamma; it's another retired promoter, and he has got his niece with him." Perhaps it should be explained that nieces may be engaged in almost all European capitals, although some retired promoters get theirs at home.

As an active newspaperman glancing off the capitals of Europe your correspondent rather envies Mr. Bowers in his post at Madrid. Spanish people like him, but they make little ceremony nowadays; so there are few occasions when the Ambassador must strap on his tackle and sit up to three hours of rare viands and general conversation among people who share his anguished desire to be at home with his feet up and a bottle of beer at his elbow reading the paper. Or perhaps Mr. Bowers, of the old New York World, prefers a can of coffee and a hamburger sandwich with plenty of onion there in his marble halls.

Shipwreck To Conference

Preparatory Maritime Technical Meeting Called In Geneva.

By Bertram Pickard.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

IT would not be true to say that the destruction by fire of the Morro Castle off Asbury Park, N. J., and the grounding of the Havana on a reef in the Bahamas has led to a conference which assembled at Geneva on Monday under the auspices of the International Labor Organization of a preparatory technical maritime conference in which a score of nations, including the United States, will take part.

It is, nevertheless, not far from the truth to suggest that the principal subject to be considered at this conference, namely, the manning of ships, is today regarded as a matter requiring international regulation, by reason of the general and professional interest aroused in "manning" by the above-mentioned disasters, and still more by a series of casualties to British shipping which occurred about the same time.

Just as in League of Nations circles one hears a good deal, since Maxim Litvinoff coined the phrase, about "the indivisibility of peace," so in the circles of the International Labor Organization "the unity of labor" is a familiar and generally acceptable formula. When thinking of equitable conditions of labor and the protection of the worker, there is a tendency to concentrate attention upon industry. But, despite one or two attempts to challenge the I. L. O.'s competence to function outside the industrial field, such competence, in theory, is clear enough; while in practice the I. L. O. has dealt, and is dealing, with such non-industrial types of labor as seamen, agricultural workers, native and colonial labor and professional workers.

At the same time, it has always been recognized that for certain classes of workers—notably seamen—special measures of protection would be required, on account of the difference in the conditions of their labor.

• • • •

SO FAR as seafaring workers are concerned, the I. L. O. lost no time in getting on to the job. The second International Labor Conference, held appropriately enough in the great port of Genoa, in 1920, was entirely devoted to maritime questions.

A maritime section of the office was at once established; while a joint maritime commission was set up comprising an equal number of shipowners' and seamen's representatives, elected at maritime sessions of the International Labor Conference. This commission exercises some executive as well as advisory functions.

But, despite the patent internationality of the mercantile service, which as far back as the Middle Ages was regulated by a sort of international code, it soon became apparent that precise agreements about conditions of work at sea were more difficult to reach than those relating to work on land.

For example, discussion of the major question of "hours of work," which at Washington, the previous year, had led to the establishment of the principle of the 8-hour day and 48-hour week, for industrial workers, resulted only in deadlock at Genoa when seamen's hours of work were in question. True, a couple of recommendations concerning the fishing industry and inland navigation were approved. But the attempt to get adopted a convention establishing the 8-hour day principle for the merchant marine not only came to grief then, but has always provided a bone of contention between shipowners' and seamen's representatives, provoking at times what even an official publication of the I. L. O. has described as "heated debates and lively incidents."

• • • •

THE Genoa conference had to content itself with three conventions respectively establishing a minimum age for work at sea, securing unemployment indemnities in case of shipwreck, and setting up machinery to facilitate the finding of employment.

In 1926, at the ninth session of the International Labor Conference, two further conventions were added to the Genoa list, one dealing with seamen's articles of agreement, the other with repatriation of seamen.

Geneva Moves Against This.

Such titles sound dull, perhaps, to the man in the street; but they cover matters of life and death importance to the man in the fo'c'sle. For instance, the second of these conventions (repatriation) provides that a seaman shall not be discharged at the ends of the earth, but brought back, at the shipowner's expense, to the country where he was engaged.

• • • •

WHEN, in 1929, at the thirteenth session of the Conference, the question of hours of work at sea came up once again for serious discussion, it was agreed by the necessary majority, after a battle royal between the shipowners and the seamen, that the possibility of regulating hours of work at sea by means of a draft convention based on the principle of the 8-hour day and 48-hour week, should be considered at the next maritime conference.

It was then thought that this would be in 1931. The office accordingly prepared a draft convention which was destined to be pigeonholed for many a long day. The economic crisis burst upon the world, and the ax of economy descended upon the credits for maritime conferences for several years.

It is only now, in 1935, that new circumstances appear to warrant another attempt to regulate by international agreement the seamen's code, as the collection of laws and regulations dealing with maritime labor is popularly called.

Shipowners, Seamen Join Governments In Discussions.

THESE new circumstances were in part suggested at the beginning of this article. Just as the collision, in August, 1926, between the French liner, Lotus, and the Turkish collier, Boz-Kourt, resulted in the question of "professional capacity of officers," put on one side earlier in 1926, being put back on the agenda for 1929, so the two disasters already referred to, together with the British shipping casualties, have brought the whole question of the manning of ships into the forefront of maritime discussion.

Thus it comes about that the problem of regulating hours of work at sea, pops out of its pigeon hole, linked with the wider question of "manning." The manning of ships, so the report recently circulated by the office of governments makes clear, has several aspects. It is not merely a question of safety at sea, but also a social question. Upon the number and proficiency of officers and crew depends not only readiness to meet emergency, but also the possibility of an equitable distribution of work, leisure and sleep under normal conditions.

The report also shows that for the last 25 years, and especially since the war, "manning" has been subjected to special regulations by an increasing number of States; while since 1929, new and, in most cases, detailed rules have been put into operation by such countries as Denmark, Germany, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands and Spain.

Thus, the authors of the report conclude, it would seem that the time is ripe for an attempt to reach international agreement in the matter, though it is not expected that the conference, which is merely of a preparatory and technical character, will actually do more than outline the chief points of a draft convention or conventions. The detailed drafting will be left, probably, to the office, in preparation for definite decisions, to be taken, it is hoped, at a special maritime session of the International Labor Conference to be held in the autumn of 1936, when various questions subjected to a preliminary discussion in 1929, will also be dealt with.

• • • •

THE following countries have been invited to join in the present technical preparation, all possessing a mercantile marine of more than 250,000 tons gross, namely: Great Britain, the United States, Japan, Norway, Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Sweden, Greece, Spain, Denmark, Canada, the U. S. S. R., Brazil, Finland, Belgium, China, Yugloslavia, Argentina, Australia, Panama, Portugal and India.

Each country attending will be represented by three delegates representing the government, employers' organizations and seamen's organizations, respectively.

Valley Forge.

The ragged Continentals, cold, unfed;
This countryside is hallowed by the blood
Of hundreds of the Nation's noblest dead.
These fields are sacred to a precious cause
That all the might of Britain could not stop—
("This way! A red-hot frankfurter and roll!
Here Washington tramped through the ragged lines
Of starving but unconquered fighting men;
With bleeding feet they staggered to the fray,
And met death asking neither how nor when;
Beneath these trees the valiant fighters sleep—
Their presence seems to sanctify the spot—
Come on! You gotta get 'em while they're hot!")
The icy winds howled like the blast of death
Across these fields, knee-deep in ice and snow;
Here pioneers of valiant, sturdy stock
Fought on against the horror few men know;
The darkest days the country ever knew
Gave way to sunshine through their valor here—
An' all hot folks! A ten-cent glass o' beer!")
Here rafts were fashioned out of virgin oak
By hands that stiffened in the freezing sleet;
Here heroes limped along on lifeless stumps
To fashion into shape the crudest fleet;
The spirit of these dead defy all words
And breed new reverence for land and flag—("Fresh roasted popcorn, people, right this way!

No End Of Books

Tall Tales From Tibet.

LAST winter, in Harper's Magazine, Mr. Harrison Forman told a personal narrative which set us all on our glazed, incredulous ears. Under the title "I Saw the King of Hell," he related with the utter avowal of truth his impressions of a most curious Tibetan ceremony.

It seems that every so often, but at no stated time, the Tibetan "nukhwas" (magicians of the sect of pre-Buddhistic Bonis) must prove their power over the nether demons. So now a score of them, in their robes and long coiled hair, were seated in a loose circle high within a grove of candle-flame on a Tibetan mountainside. Mr. Forman, in disguise, was there with them. In silence the grand wizard squatted on a flat-topped rock, the silence deepened, the trees shivered. Then, at no signal, and with the deep gutteral tones of Tibetan worship, the "nukhwas" called out: "Yamantaka! Yamantaka! Yamantaka!" They were calling Yama, "Judge of the Dead and Lord of Hells."

The grand wizard blew a long mournful note on a trumpet made from a human thigh bone; he lifted a skull and took a sip of human blood; the "nukhwas" swayed backward and forward and called again three times. In the deepening twilight the cycle was repeated, and then once more, and then the "nukhwas" began a low and hair-raising moaning.

And then? Well, bless you, then out of a little mist in the center of the group rose Yama himself, Yama of the nine heads and 34 arms and 16 legs, as clear and definite in the twilight as a carven statue, but leering and dancing horribly. Other gods and demons followed. Then, having willed them all to appear, the "nukhwas" had to will them back. The "nukhwas" left. And there was Mr. Forman bathed in sweat.

• • • •

MASS hypnotism or not, it makes a grand yarn, and one you would think pretty hard to equal. But in Mr. Forman's volume, "Through Forbidden Tibet" (Longmans Green, $3.50), the visit of the King of Hell is but a chapter—and not overly conspicuous, at that, among a great array of tall and exciting tales.

Mr. Forman, in China in 1929 for a group of aeroplane manufacturers, became interested in the hinterland. With two companions, he set off for Anmyi Machin, an unclimbed mountain in northeastern Tibet reported to be, possibly, higher than Everest. Both of his companions were killed by bandits. Mr. Forman, alone, pushed on into Tibet. He joined a caravan, made friends with Old Sherap the Wise One (an aged "nukhwa," the one who took him to the devil-raising ceremony)—and he entered upon more strange adventures than you could shake a stick at.

He became the intimate friend of the 17-year old Lama of Tibet's fourth largest lamasery—who was a god before his people, but who in private chambers reveled in taking watches and flashlights apart and thought nothing was so much fun as to explore the amazing fact of pockets in Mr. Forman's clothes. Indeed, he was distinctly peeved when Mr. Forman adopted Tibetan attire.

But the young Lama gave our author a pass which took him all over the territory, which allowed him to see everything in Tibetan life from a unique woman Lama to the gruesome but logical method of "burying" the dead by exposing them to vultures.

• • • •

NO doubt at all, Mr. Forman makes fine and lively reading of his sojourn in Tibet. He is sensible in telling us that yak-butter in tea is nothing very odd or unpalatable; he is vastly amusing in the account of the Tibetan girl who wanted to marry him and his three guides all at once; he can give you goose-flesh when he tells you the adventure of the woman Lama and the cave full of bats.

And yet so unusual were the sights he saw that you could scarcely credit them more than a whit—were it not for the fact that the book is studded with amazing photographs. Travelers' photographs are, for the most part, stiff and dull. Not these, however. For Mr. Forman's camera has caught almost everything short of Yama himself vividly and beautifully. It is as if Baron Munchausen had had his graflex with him.

Presidential Election In Cuba Set for Dec. 15

Havana, Nov. 26 (AP).—Cuba's presidential election "will be held December 15, as scheduled," Maximiliano Smith, secretary of the interior, announced today after a cabinet session. Smith said that although political parties had not accepted a peace formula for the elections, he had one he believed they would accept.

A recent ruling by the supreme electoral court against union of parties, thus breaking up the Mariansta-Nationalist-Liberal alliance, created a political crisis and the possibility that the elections would be postponed.

U. S. Relief Aids Broke Promise, Davey Charges

Ohio Governor Says Federal Failure Was Cause of Problem.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 26.—Dapper Gov. Martin L. Davey, who last March engaged in a bitter battle with Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, today asserted a "broken promise" by Federal relief authorities precipitated a critical relief financial problem in Ohio.

Davey's new attack on the National Administration's relief policy came the day after Charles Sawyer, runner-up for the Democratic nomination last year, announced he would oppose Davey again in 1936.

"Ever since early last spring," Davey said, "the Federal relief authorities have promised over and over again to put all the employable to work on the Federal program, first by a given date and then later on successive dates. They have assumed full responsibility for the employables. Every State and local government had a right to feel these promises would be faithfully kept.

"It is unbelievable that such a solemn promise would be broken or that the Federal relief authorities would run out on the helpless people."

Hopkins, at Cleveland, declined to comment on Davey's charge but expressed confidence in the ultimate success of the Government's program.

"I don't think there has been undue delay (in the WPA program) except in the minds of some people," he said. "I'm not worried about it all."

The Governor filed criminal libel charges against Hopkins last March after the relief administrator accused Davey campaign workers of engaging in a "shakedown" of persons and firms selling to the now defunct State relief commission.

Davey, appearing then before the Legislature to deny the charges, said "either the recovery program is a failure or there is something terribly wrong with relief as it is administered."

"Come to Ohio, if you dare," Davey challenged Hopkins. When the administrator appeared later in Cleveland for an address, the Governor disclosed he had withdrawn the libel warrant.

Sales of Securities Exceed 2 Billions

October Turnover Is More Than 1934 Figure.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission last night announced a $2,214,379,595 stock market turnover for October, the largest since it began keeping statistics a year ago.

This figure, the combined dollar value of all stocks and bonds sold on all registered exchanges, was 31.9 per cent greater than September and 161.2 per cent over October, 1934.

Stock sales totaled $1,912,161,309, a 35.5 per cent increase over September, and bond sales aggregated $302,177,535, a boost of 11.3 per cent over September.

The New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb Exchange accounted for 95.1 per cent of the value of all sales.

I. C. C. Votes Extension Of Illinois Central Loan

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday approved a two-year extension of a $7,778,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan to the Illinois Central Railroad. The loan would have matured December 7.

The commission held that collateral pledged for the obligation "constitutes full and adequate security" and that the railroad "is not in need of financial reorganization in the public interest at this time."

World Putty-Like, Oval, Says Physicist

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 26. — The world is like a great ball of putty, in the opinion of Dr. Archer Hoyt, constantly changing shape in response to celestial attraction.

Asserting the earth is neither round like a globe, as Christopher Columbus thought, nor flat like a beefsteak, as Wilbur Glenn Voliva thinks, Dr. Hoyt contends it is oval.

"We discovered that some time ago, when we were perfecting an instrument in our laboratory to measure gravity," said Dr. Hoyt, young research physicist, "we found the world actually has a hump that resembles a great belt around the globe, caused by the attraction of the moon, sun and other celestial bodies.

"Every day, for instance, Pittsburgh's buildings are raised from 1 foot to 23 inches, depending on the position of celestial bodies."

Hopkins Calls Future Relief Up to Congress

Permanent Work Program, Elimination of Direct Aid Advocated.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Nov. 26.—Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief chieftain, heard the question from an audience tonight, "After direct relief ends December 1 and the WPA ends next July, what then?

His answer: "That is entirely up to Congress. I don't know what they'll do, but I have my notions as to what ought to be done."

The question came at the end of his lecture on the Federal relief policy tonight at the Euclid Avenue Temple. Asked in an interview, later, to elaborate on his reply, he said:

"I believe there should not be any more direct relief. We are through giving out baskets of groceries. I do not expect industry to pick up all the employables before next July, although that is not impossible at the rate industry is going.

"There ought to be a more-or-less permanent work program to take care of the hills and valleys of business. When industrial employment drops, this would be a reservoir of work."

During the course of his lecture he discussed the various means of providing social security, mentioning old-age pensions, pensions for widowed mothers, and, possibly in the future, sickness insurance.

He said "employment assurance" would be a goal to work for, and declared he was in favor of retaining the Civilian Conservation Corps indefinitely.

In his lecture he defended the Federal relief policy with this statement:

"Behind all the smokescreen of criticism and political attack on our relief policy lies the shameless and unmarked opposition to a Government which says that no one shall starve."

Kansas G. O. P. Launches Boom For Alf Landon

Young Republicans Will Open Drive to 'Sell' Him at Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Nov. 26.—A Nation-wide campaign to "sell" Gov. Alf M. Landon as a Presidential candidate was disclosed tonight.

Young Kansas Republicans announced the drive will be opened December 6 and 7 at a State convention here.

At the same time, friends of the budget-balancing Governor indicated he may decide formally to launch his candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination at the annual Kansas Day banquet, January 29.

Landon himself persisted in his policy of silence, publicly at least, on all Landon-for-President talk.

The significant point about the young Republicans' convention is that young party leaders from virtually every State have been invited. A number have accepted. They will meet and hear Gov. Landon at a banquet.

This affair will be topped in State political importance by the Kansas Day rally, the event that marks opening of Republican campaign activities in election years. Republicans from other States also will be invited to this affair.

Even if Landon still refuses to commit himself at the Kansas Day meeting, speakers will outline his record and urge Republicans nationally to give him their support.

The State committee is attempting to raise $32,000 for the unusually early Kansas party activities.

Dr. W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture in the Coolidge Cabinet and Minister to Egypt during the Hoover Administration, today urged nomination of Landon as the G. O. P. Presidential candidate.

Three Bayer Aspirin tablets, crushed and dissolved in ½ glass of water as a gargle. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back to permit this medicated gargle to reach the irritated membranes of the throat.

Your doctor will approve this treatment as perhaps the quickest, simplest way known to fight cold and sore throat.

The Bayer Aspirin taken internally will combat a cold almost instantly, and ease the usual pains that accompany one. The gargle will ease sore throat in a few minutes. For it acts like a local anesthetic in relieving pain and rawness.

When you buy, though, see that you get real BAYER ASPIRIN tablets. For they dissolve almost instantly in the stomach and thus start working almost instantly. And they dissolve completely enough to use as a gargle. Watch out for this.

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water.

By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

A Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach—Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN

On the Air Today

A TELEGRAM was received late yesterday from Fred Waring's New York office saying in effect that the Pennsylvanian's maestro had prepared a few special little extras for last night's air show. Among the new features was to be Snooney. Mr. Ronnie Ames, who conducts various activities in connection with Mr. Waring's affairs in the interests of preserving Mr. Waring's identity in the public mind, suggested that he would consider it a great personal favor if I would listen to Mr. Waring's show and report my reaction, since it employed a new set-up.

But the joke was on Mr. Ames. The idea of ever missing a Waring show never has raised its head—with me. With or without Snooney. With or without new program production ideas.

It just so happens I am an inveterate Waring fan. And so I know in advance that whatever Mr. Ames and Mr. Waring had in mind for last night's innovation, it would be acceptable with me.

Josef Israels, special newspaper correspondent stationed at Addis Ababa, again will summarize the week's developments in the Italo-Ethiopian situation for C. B. S. listeners tonight, at 5, WJSV. The program also will include a group of native musicians playing European and American instruments.

At the end of that short-wave quarter hour, C. B. S. switches to Hawaii, approximately 11,000 miles away. There, from a transmitter located near the base of Mauna Loa, will be made a pickup of sounds from a volcanic eruption which is imminent. (WJSV will not broadcast the Hawaii quarter hour. Try other C. B. S. stations.)

Today's high spots:

Fred Allen: Presents Elsie Tucker, speechless for four years as result of a throat operation and now finds herself a "female barytone" WBC, at 9.

"Moon Melody": New Martin Broones composition, sung by John Charles Thomas. WMAL, at 9.

Lily Pons: Features "I Dream Too Much," from her recent film. WJSV, at 9.

"Feud": Between Gracie Allen and Milton Watson continues. WJSV, at 8:30.

Unpublished trio: By Debussy will be played in "Music Guild" program. WRC, at 2:30. Features Maurice Dumesnil, French pianist.

WOL will run through Thanksgiving Day afternoon without a football game. Which will be appreciated by many listeners who have no interest in punts and touchdowns after their holiday dinner. WOL reports that the station has been offered the Dartmouth-Columbia game by Intercity headquarters in New York and that Washingtonians who would like to hear the broadcast are welcome to come to the WOL studios where it will be made available on loud speakers. But for the public at large, while forward passes and end runs dominate on other stations, WOL will provide an afternoon of music.

Beheaded for Treason.

Berlin, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Albrecht Spiess, 29, was beheaded today by the top-hatted, frock-coated Nazi headsman for betraying military secrets.

In Birthday Dance Tonight

The Club Habana celebrates its first birthday anniversary tonight with a big spotlight on Nadine and Girardo. Eve Davis, who becomes Harry Albert's Ambassadress of Song at the Ambassador Room by virtue of winning the Ambassador's search-for-talent contest.

Chest Total Climbs As Divisions Gain

23 More Pass Quota Since Close of Drive Proper.

Twenty-three additional divisions have passed their quota since the Community Chest campaign proper ended last week, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, governmental unit chairman, announced yesterday.

The Social Security Board solicitors reached a new high with 321 per cent of their allotment.

Numerous canvassers continued at work in hope of climbing closer to the campaign goal of $1,877,900. Last reports showed slightly more than $1,700,000 pledged. An audit, including last minute gifts, will be completed next month.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

A Columnist's Pad

New York, Nov. 26.

GRAND opera parody which Willie and Eugene Howard do is the best convulsively hysterical thing in the comedy realm. Willie Howard is the No. 1 comic of the show business, a rating that other comics will not dispute.

• • • •

Notes: Jockey Bobbie Merritt and Babs Ryan were sealed on Saturday . . . The Joe Reichmans (she was Elma Bennett) are talking it over already . . . Young F. D. Roosevelt attended a Broadway show with Hope Williams the other night in a wig and mustache disguise . . . Add hands-across-the-table: Willie de Rham and Kay Weary, Virgil Moore and Renee Torres, Dan Topping and Sally Clark a Texas peach; Lorraine Holmes and Louis de Rivera . . . Georges Metaxa goes to El Patio at Palm Beach . . . Harry Rosenthal goes to the Everglades there . . . Henry King and his band have put the Central Park Casino back in the money class . . . Hugh O'Connell goes into the Follies . . . Most exciting Page 1 story will crack when the bomb squad nails the "jubilee" incendiarists!

• • • •

Lillian Roth, now Mrs. Judge Ben Shalleck, has turned more and more to charity since abandoning the screen and stage. Her Charlanna Philanthropic League, this season, has raised over $5,000 for all creeds. "Charlanna" is a tribute to her husband's parents, a combination of Charles and Anna Shalleck.

• • • •

Bob Hope, fine comic of "Roberta," has the funniest opening line on stage. He walks on and says: "Now that the amateurs have finished . . ." The pleasant insolence of it always gets a howl. Backstage his pretty wife, Dolores Reade, stands in the wings and listens to every line he utters. She is a swingy singer in her own right.

• • • •

• • • •

Dave Mulligan, gray-haired manager of the Hotel Biltmore, is a Canadian. He played on the championship lacrosse team of Canada years ago, "Canada's greatest amateur athlete, he says, was Harvey Pulford, the Jim Thorpe of the North country. Plenty of Canadians have made good in New York. McGill sends famous surgeons here; General Hospital of Montreal sends crack nurses. Helen Morgan really got her start in Canada, despite local claims. She first appeared on Broadway as "Miss Montreal." Jack Denny and Guy Lombardo dropped in from Canada, too.

• • • •

Dorothy Mackaill is swell. She played the huge Jewish Federation benefit for Louis Sobol and myself Sunday night. Just before going on stage, she handed me what I thought was a note. Opening it, I found a $20 bill and three $10 bills. "Give it to the charity," she insisted. "It is a worthy cause." I had to get Irving Berlin and Morton Downey to persuade her to take back the $50. "You've done enough by just appearing," said Berlin.

• • • •

Of the Waldorf audience that listened to Louis (Connie's Inn) Armstrong play the trumpet, none got so huge a kick as Mannie Kline and Ruby Bloom, in Herman Bernie's pit band. Kline and Bloom are two of the triple-A horns of the country. Old Satchel-Mouth Armstrong was playing directly at 'em.

Femme former screen stars generally turn to singing. Ruth Roland, Estelle Taylor are cases in point. Miss Roland, one of the wealthiest of the serial queens of the flickers, can sing "Shine" better than most professional warblers.

• • • •

Paul Whiteman has to ride a horse for his first appearance in "Jumbo." He practiced three weeks in Central Park to learn the right side on which to mount. The left side is the right side to mount, in other words.

• • • •

They're the tops: Fred Waring and his choir of male voices, the most thrilling combination on local stages . . . Ben Yost and his Varsity Octet of male singers, in their college medley . . . Cardini, suavest of tricksters . . . Georgie Tapps, with feet that rival the artistry of Fred Astaire . . . Frazee Sisters, greatest sister team to hit the Stem in the past five years (they're St. Paul, Minn., gals) . . . Dave Rubinoff's fiddle, plenty beguiling in "Thanks a Million" . . . Dizzy Ritz and Dopey Ritz, the three Ritz Brothers . . . Helen Morgan, poignancy on a piano top . . . Jules Lande, Kreisler at Times Square.

Thanksgiving Dinner in Cafe Is Easiest Way

By Chanticleer.

How about stepping out Thanksgiving (that would be tomorrow, according to my calendar) and having a delicious dinner—at one of Washington's many good restaurants?

Not a bad idea, say I. No fussing around with shopping today. No stewing around in the kitchen tomorrow morning. Just sleep late—and loaf around the house for awhile—and then to your favorite hotel or restaurant or chicken dinner place.

It really seems sort of silly, doesn't it, to go through all the motions of preparing a traditionally big dinner—when a score of skilled chefs are even now going through the advance preparations for a turkey dinner or roast duck or some equally delectable dish with all the trimmings, just for your pleasure.

• • • •

Eve has entered the Ambassador's Garden of Eden. She made her first appearance Monday night when she was selected from a group of six finalists in the Ambassador room's "search-for-a-girl-singer-for-Harry-Albert's-band" contest.

Her full name is Eve Davis and as the Ambassador's "Ambassadress of Song" I predict she will be a distinctly acceptable addition to the musical menu. It was not an easy assignment—selecting one girl from the six finalists. Every time I am called on to serve as a judge in such competitions I grow more and more aware of the difficulties presented in boiling the field down to one fortunate winner.

Eve seemed to be the ideal choice for the Ambassador Room's rose and tan decorative motif. And can she sing? Mister, she is aces.

There seems to be a rumor floating about that the Cotton Club has ceased and desisted from serving likker. That, my friends, is an error. Firewater is available as formerly—in the regular hours, of course.

• • • •

Johnny Barnes brings Bill Robinson's famous Step Dance to the Madrillon this week. It's that distinctive style of raising up and laying down the feet that made Robinson the tops in tap dancing. In fact you hear more than you see. It's that fast. As though that were not enough in dancing speed, a redheaded whirlwind, in the person of Suzanne Hall, does acrobatic and control dances all over the floor—and for the tired business man we recommend Sultana, who rhumbas and boleros and—things like that.

• • • •

A gala celebration of Thanksgiving night, with noise makers, confetti and souvenirs, is only the beginning of a festive season at the Dude Ranch. You see, on about December 3 or 4, the Dude Ranch's black and white room is to be opened with very fitting and appropriate ceremonies. And Host Milt Barrett announces there will be no advance for either big nights. Incidentally, this is the last week for Kay and her Kaydets. Better get out there if you haven't already become a Kay fan.

• • • •

Buddy Harmon and the Mayflower Lounge Orchestra have gone psychic! That's the impression, at least, that you may get as you walk in the door, because almost instantly Buddy and the boys play one of your favorite old tunes. But there's really nothing mysterious about it. Up at the Mayflower they specialize in those delightful old favorites of a few years back and every so often a "Mayflower Medley" is played, made up entirely of favorites, past and present.

Bernie Pincus has jined up with the Gingham Club. Bernie has no press agent. He never sang at Atlantic City's Whatsis or Manhattan's Whosis. Bernie comes unheralded and without benefit of voice training. But he's entertaining the customers at the Childs rendezvous no end. Bernie, be it known, is a Post early edition newsboy. He sings and then sells papers. I am advised on reliable authority, and is making a hit with the patrons and a little money for himself.

• • • •

Van Smith, who barytones at Connecticut avenue's Ramon's, had some unexpected assistance, and competition, a night or two ago when the Three Rhythm Boys walked in and joined him in a song. They do say that Ramon's is the place where "old friends meet."

• • • •

None other than Maestro Milt Davis, of Hamilton's Rainbow Room, is authority for this interesting analysis of popular tunes: "I'm in the Mood for Love" comes from Chopin's Funeral March; "Isle of Capri" is from a Russian folk song, note for note; "On Treasure Island" is remarkably similar to "Blue Danube" waltz. Just goes to show what Milt and the boys do to amuse themselves between dance goups.

• • • •

It's Earl Lindsay week again at the Lotus. This fellow Lindsay has produced some of the slickest revues the Lotus has presented in the last year—and the present is up to the usual high Lindsay standard. It's entirely new—costumes, beautiful gals, specialty artists and all. Featured are Patricia and Ronardo, from the New Yorker Terrace Room in New York. They do—ahhh,ha—an underworld tango! Ted and Ethel Walker are well up in the public approval with their eccentric and comedy dance act.

• • • •

Tonight's the night at Club Habana. It's Guy Scott's first anniversary and a birthday cake of no less than 50 pounds in size will be distributed to those present. Bert Granoff will be on hand to sing and a Philadelphia songstress who is a dead ringer for Mary Brian of the flickers and suggests Frances Langford when she sings—will play an important part in the festivities. Nadine and Girardo will provide a round of spectacular dance numbers. Paul says to phone those reservations before it's too late.

The challenge is still ringing from the Shoreham ballroom, where Ramon and Renita are now appearing in their second Washington week. They're the best ballroom dancers in the country today—and the public is making the Shoreham the 'hit spot' of the town as a result," says the latest word from the haunts of Barnee and his Maxim Lowe musicians. Also featured this week are the Bonners, a mixed harmony team recently featured on Major Bowes' "Capitol Family Hour."

The log fires in the open fireplaces at Griffith Farms will crcakle a welcome to you tomorrow with a variety of Thanksgiving delicacies ready for the appropriately hungry visitor. Brick Dornin and his Varsity Six Orchestra have arranged a special program for the holiday.

Just catch a load of grins on Ben Shook's and Jimmy Nichols' faces these days. The saxophonists at Pete Macias' Heigh-Ho Club have just bought new homes. And though they play saxes side by side, they certainly went to opposites in real estate. Don's house is out in Maryland, and Jimmy's is down in Old Virginny. (Mesdames Shook and Nichols are now ready to give household notes to all comers!)

Matt Windsor is feeling gratified these days over his success in reproducing a genuine atmosphere for the Club Volga Boatmen. In the last few weeks representatives of some six embassies and legations have become more or less regular patrons, many of them from those countries of the continent neighboring Windsor's native Russia. Diplomats seem to like the Gypsy Chorus.

This week sees Eileen Mercedes taking Maryland Club Gardens to pieces and putting it together again. Eileen sits at the piano on the floor and sings original (and just a bit spiey) lyrics to little tunes with what is known as ultra-finesse. Another red-head who knows how to sell a song. Garron and Bennett are appearing for the second week. Dance to music by Jimmy Harris and his gang.

The final preliminary round in Emory Daugherty's amateur contest is to be staged Monday night at La Paree. And then two weeks later comes the big finale with the six winners from the early rounds all competing for the grand prize—which includes a week at La Paree. Don't forget that the circus is performing under the La Paree big top two days longer only. Friday sees a smart new revue coming in.

They're turning back the clock at the Russian Troika this week. Karavieff has originated another of those old-time and very gay little Russian sketches. This week he goes back to the days of Tolstoi and the Brothers Karamazov to produce a different, more dramatic skit called "Katinka." It's the story of a little peasant girl who goes to St. Petersburg and flirts with handsome officers. Tck! Tck! Its very quaint—and a bit touching.

Favorites at Shoreham

Mrs. Roosevelt Holds Business Has Improved

First Lady's Mail Contains Fewer Appeals for Help Than Formerly.

Better times are here again, according to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who said at her press conference yesterday that her mail makes her believe this is so.

"There was a time when there was never anything in the mail but sorrow and grief," said said. "Things now are lightening considerably.

"We have had a few letters that were rather exceptional, from people who were tremendously pleased that a home had been saved or a business saved.

"It is of course natural to write when needing help. It is much less natural to write at other times."

Her mail contains fewer really desperate pleas for help, Mrs. Roosevelt says, and as far as she has been able to observe there is a general Nation-wide improvement.

Asked about Christmas shopping trends, the First Lady declared she had noticed more buyers in the medium priced shops but doubted if there were any spurts of buying in the more expensive places.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that, as she analyzed the situation, people now had more confidence; they were busy buying things they needed and had gone without for a long time.

Questioned at the same conference as to whether her two sons had joined the President's auto safety campaign, she said that the two young men who have figured in recent auto accidents were, as far as she knew, driving very carefully right now.

She also said that plans were going forward for a gala party for the newswomen and the wives of Gridiron Club members at the White House, on the evening of the annual gridiron dinner.

Whaler Heads for Port, Fighting to Stay Afloat

San Pedro, Calif., Nov. 26 (AP).—The whaler California proceeded under its own power from Santa Barbara Island toward San Pedro today, despite a leak that for a time threatened to sink her.

Coast Guard headquarters said the vessel reported by wireless that its pumps were functioning and that, with a Coast Guard cutter and a patrol boat as convoys, expected to make port. The whaler was 40 miles off the coast when the leak developed.

Art Forum's Musicale Series Starts Tonight

The International Art Forum begins its series of musical programs tonight at the Washington Club, 1010 Seventeenth street, with a lecture-recital on Wagner by Kurt Hetzel, pianist. He will be assisted by Amelia Conti, harpist of the Metropolitan Opera; Erna Embrey, soprano, and William Fletcher Smith, barytone, who recently won a scholarship at the Juilliard Graduate School.

In addition to Dr. Hetzel's piano illustrations, the programs will contain vocal numbers from "Lohengrin" and "Tannhaeuser." Miss Embrey will sing "Elsa's Dream" and "Elizabeth's Prayer," and Mr. Smith, accompanied by Mme. Conti, will sing Wolfram's address and "O du holder mein Abendstern."

Culbertson on Bridge

The defenders' privilege of making the first lead is an equivocal one. Depending on the card or suit selected, it may pay handsome dividends or result in ruin.

If the opening lead were made only after careful scrutiny of all four hands I believe that fully half the game contracts fulfilled against an average blind opening lead would be defeated. Please note that I have specified average in this assertion. It is true that no player alive can invariably make a "double dummy" opening lead, but a gifted few come close to this standard.

North, dealer.

WEST
♠ 10 8 5 3

EAST

SOUTH
♠ None
♦ A J 10 6 4 3 2
♣ J 10 7 3 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	1 ♠	2 ♦	3 ♣
3 ♥	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♣
Double	Pass	Pass	Redouble

South, on lead, had much food for thought. His partner had bid and rebid hearts, so his singleton eight was the conventionally proper opening. But it appeared doubtful, in view of the strong bidding by both opponents, that the heart and diamond remnants were distributed evenly, or that enough tricks could be won in the suits to defeat the contract. North's double indicated a sure trick in trumps to act as "control." If North also had a singleton club, and it could be removed while South retained the diamond ace as entry, a club ruff might be the setting trick.

South acted on this line of reasoning and led a low club. The subsequent play followed his diagnosis perfectly. North won the first lead of trumps and put South in with a diamond. A second club was led and ruffed by North, who could not be prevented from winning a heart trick later for the contract's defeat. Had the heart been led, East needed to be careful of only one thing: to enter dummy with a diamond rather than a club, which would have allowed a later ruff.

Every man in the town must let his beard grow or pay the city $1 for an exemption permit.

Tear Proposes Detector Test Case Suspects

in the human body under emotional stress.

This is the same change which takes place when danger is met. The body steels itself against danger, they say, and red blood corpuscles rush from the spleen to the blood stream, where they are augmented by secretions of energy from the various energizing glands.

These physiological operations are accompanied by a faster heart-beat, just as the heart pounds when one is in fear of danger.

Thus, the exponents of the lie detector assert, when one is in danger of becoming implicated in a crime, which may mean death to him, he fears the consequences of implicating himself by truthfully answering an incriminating question.

Begin Tracings.

It is then that the ink indicator on a chart begins its irregular tracings, which lead to confessions, the experts claim. Even though confessions are not obtained, some important witness may be discovered to be lying on a particular point, which, if disclosed, will open up collateral lines of inquiry.

Tear also has offered to submit to tests of scopolamin, or what is known as "truth serum." This drug has the effect of stifling portions of the brain which are claimed to be the parts used for telling lies. This drug, however, leaves the powers of speech and memory unimpaired.

Lieut. Robert W. Hicks, a criminologist brought into the case by Prince Georges County Police, has announced that he will ask Tear for a paraffin impression of his teeth.

His idea is to compare the impression with teeth marks he said he found on the left hand of the murdered girl.

To Requestion Hampton.

Today Lieut. Itzel will requestion Aubrey Hampton, 30-year-old Government clerk, a former fiance of Corinna, before she met Tear.

Hampton, who lives in the 1000 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest, was arrested and held for two days after the girl's body was found on November 9, on lonely Saddleback Ridge, four blocks from her home. He was released after Itzel entered the case.

Itzel yesterday spent nearly two hours in the Loring home, going over the belongings in Corinna's hope chest. He found there a rag doll she had as a baby, and many things she planned to bring to her own home.

"That girl was the sweetest model of a woman I have ever known," Itzel said after he left the house.

Civil War Veteran to Wed Today

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Col. Ira B. Wildman, 85-year-old G. A. R. veteran, and Mrs. Ella Bond, of Oshkosh, Wis., "Bluebird of the G. A. R.," as the colonel greeted her at New York yesterday. They will be married in Danbury, Conn., today—and aren't they the happy pair, though?

"But I didn't get a clew that would help in this investigation."

Investigators last night asked Arthur C. Keefer, attorney for the Loring family, to determine whether Corinna had an account in the Riggs National Bank.

In a Mount Rainier bank, police learned she once had as high as $500. The balance is now less than $100. There were three withdrawal vouchers.

One was for $200, indorsed by Leo LoJacono, her brother-in-law used for the purchase of Government bonds; another for $150 was endorsed by Mrs. Loring for money paid by Corinna as advance board and for an electric refrigerator she bought for the family; and a third for $70 was endorsed by Tear.

Tear said that Corinna suggested that he use this sum to pay a debt, contracted when he borrowed money on his car, so that the high rate of interest could be eliminated.

Driver Hurt Badly In Auto Collision

One man was critically injured yesterday in an accident in which a truck was overturned, a lamp post knocked down and the lives of several pedestrians were endangered.

Harvey J. Jones, 26, of the 1300 block H street northeast, driver of one of the cars, suffered a crushed chest and physicians at Providence Hospital said he had little chance to live.

Jones' car collided at Twelfth and G streets northeast shortly after noon with a truck operated by Joseph H. Hunter, 24, of the 600 block Fourth street northeast. Clarence Moulton, 28, 127 Twelfth street northeast, a passenger in Jones' car, was admitted to Casualty Hospital for treatment to a sprained back.

Fletcher Sees NewDeal Abuse Of Tax Powers

Urges Voters to Name New Congress; Hits Guffey Act as Destructive.

Election of a Congress that will put an end to use of the taxing power in "the taking of property from one class and giving it to another" was called for last night by Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee.

Misuse of the taxing power to gain indirectly objectives "which it cannot achieve directly was charged to the Administration by Fletcher, in a radio talk. Recalling Chief Justice Marshall's declaration that "the power to tax is the power to destroy," the Republican chairman said that extension of the taxing power in the manner followed in the Guffey coal act would cause "the destruction not only of our free economic system, but also of our free political system."

He predicted "this attempt (the Guffey act) at compulsory regulation by the tax route will be held a penalty and not a tax, and therefore unconstitutional." On the other hand, he said, if the Supreme Court upholds the power of Congress to "tax and regulate" the bituminous coal industry under the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution, then Congress has power to regulate all other industries, "and all the other safeguards in the Constitution which limit the powers of the central government and protect the people against tyranny, bureaucracy and regimentation are swept aside."

Continuing, he declared that "unfortunately the Congress as now composed has abdicated its powers into the hands of the Executive, and the power of the people to tax themselves has, in effect, been handed to the President and his advisers, who have drafted the laws of this Congress and dictated their enactment."

"The framers of the Constitution," he said, "had a far-seeing purpose in providing that all measures of taxation must originate in the House of Representatives, and that all, members of that branch must be elected every two years," and he called on the voters to "exercise that right of suffrage which is guaranteed them * * * to keep control of the popular branch of our Government."

Bishop of Ethiopia Makes War 'Official'

Addis Ababa, Nov. 26 (AP).—A proclamation by the abuna (high bishop) of Ethiopia which in the eyes of all Ethiopians will be regarded as an official declaration of war against Italy, was being transmitted tonight to all the empire's chieftains.

The document, not yet made public generally in Addis Ababa, was directed chiefly to the provinces, where it was expected to have an electrifying effect on the highly religious populations.

It reveals that for the first time in Ethiopian history the abuna will not go to the front, but will remain at Addis Ababa for the duration of the war.

Clipper Arrives At Guam; Is Due In Manila Today

First Trans-Pacific Air-Mail Nearing End of Long Flight.

By the Associated Press.

Guam Island, (Wednesday), Nov. 27.—Initial transpacific air mail completed the next to last leg of its 8,000-mile journey today as the trim China Clipper landed here after flying the 1,536-mile stretch from Wake Island.

By the Associated Press.

Wake Island (Wednesday), Nov. 27 (via Pan-American Airways Communications).—As the Clipper skimmed away from the lagoon here at 6:04 a. m. (2:04 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern standard time), she had 38½ hours' flying behind her from Alameda.

The seaplane landed at 3:07 p. m., (12:07 a. m. Wednesday E. S. T.), completing the flight in 10 hours and 3 minutes, and bringing it only 1,700 miles from Manila, end of the journey.

The flying boat is scheduled to complete its flight from Alameda, Calif., tomorrow by spanning the remaining link between here and Manila.

In about 38½ hours of flying time, the China Clipper has covered 6,300 miles of its trail-blazing voyage to establish transpacific air-mail service.

Japanese Army Invades China To Force Split

Nanking Plans Resistance But Appears Unable to Halt Division.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Tientsin (Wednesday), Nov. 27.—The Japanese army moved into north China today prepared to support the autonomy movement headed by Gen. Yin Ju-Keng and to prevent disorders by Chinese mobs.

At the same time the National government in Nanking threatened military resistance to the autonomists and instructed the Hopei provincial government to dismiss and punish Gen. Yin, who still holds the minor post in the demilitarized zone which he deserted to declare an autonomous state in eastern Hopei.

The first contingents of the invading Japanese from Manchukuo, chief base of the Japanese army in northern Asia, reached Peiping late yesterday. They comprised 160 soldiers armed with light and heavy machine guns and came into the old capital from Shanhaikwan on a special train.

Simultaneously, Yin Ju-Keng announced at his capital in Tungchow, near Peiping, 10,000 Japanese troops marched through the Great Wall at Kupiekow and headed toward Miyuen-Hsien, a walled city, about 30 miles north of Peiping.

Miyuen-Hsien was divisional headquarters during the Japanese invasion of north China two years ago, following bitter fighting at Kupeikow in which hundreds of Chinese were killed.

A second detachment of 80 Japanese machine gunners passed through Tientsin en route to Peiping at dusk yesterday.

Two Japanese armored trains which have been held at Shanhaikwan, gateway from north China into Manchukuo, were reported moving toward Tangku, down-river port of Tientsin.

Meantime, Japanese military headquarters here issued a formal statement supporting the autonomy movement and asserting that "any effort of the Nanking government to suppress it will be useless."

This statement was reinforced by a declaration of the Japanese Embassy, through a spokesman in Shanghai, saying:

"Japan considers it imperative that the political and administrative reorganization of the northern provinces (Hopei, Shansi, Chahar, Shantung and Suiyan, with a total population of about 85,000,000 people) be hastened to enable these regions to maintain normal economic relations with the independent empire of Manchukuo and Japan.

In answer to these moves the Nanking government threatened to fight.

It instructed Sung Cheh-Yuan, commander of the Peiping-Tientsin garrisons, and Shang Chen, governor of Hopei, to crush the autonomy movement and arrest Yin Ju-Keng, and announced appointment of Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, war minister, to proceed to Peiping as "administrative high commissioner." Sung Cheh-Yuan was named "pacification commissioner" of Hopei and Charhar. The Peiping branch of the military council was abolished and its duties transferred to the Nanking military affairs commission, of which Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek is chairman.

tion has been formed," the letter said, adding:

"It has been formed for the purpose of encouraging and promoting the organization of the unorganized workers in mass production and other industries upon an industrial basis. Its aim is to foster recognition and acceptance of collective bargaining in such basic industries; to counsel and advise unorganized and newly organized groups of workers; to bring them under the banner and in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

"The committee for industrial organization is already serving as a clearing house for information and advice, and as a means of pooling the experience of different groups, through personal contacts, correspondence and publications. Reports from interested organizations on their problems and experience are welcomed.

A. F. L. Affiliation Urged.

"It is the desire of this committee to further in every way the effort of groups of workers in autos, aluminum, radio and many other mass production industries to find a place within the organized labor movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor.

"Such a great proportion of the workers are outside of the American Federation of Labor or outside of the organized labor movement entirely that a group of leaders of labor representing over a million workers allied with the American Federation of Labor thought that the most efficient thing to do at the present time was to place their experience at the service of these unorganized workers, or those unaffiliated with the American Federation of Labor, with the purpose of bringing them, where organized, into the federation, and, where unorganized, doing everything possible to further organization along lines that would best serve their interest as workers."

The avowed purpose of the committee is not to form an organization outside the federation, but to change the federation's policy and to bring workers now unorganized within the national group. Lewis is determined upon this course, but there is a large group within the federation, representing a majority of the unions, just as firmly opposed.

Showdown Expected.

A showdown may develop at the convention of the mine workers in Washington, starting January 28. Green, who is a member of the miners' union, is officially a delegate to the convention. He has declined to indicate whether he will bring the issue to the floor of the convention and thus openly clash with Lewis, his long-time associate.

Green was for many years secretary-treasurer of the Mine Workers.

Besides Lewis and Howard, members of the committee are Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and former NRA board member; David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union; Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America; Harvey C. Freming, president of the Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America; M. Zaritsky, president of the cap and millinery department of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers International Union, and Thomas H. Brown, president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Green Silent on Lewis.

Indianapolis, Nov. 26 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, arrived here unannounced tonight and refused to discuss the labor turmoil over the campaign of John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, to unionize mass-production workers.

Green said he was here on business, tomorrow, at the headquarters of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and that there is no danger of the federation being smashed by the action of the mine workers' president.

No Laughing Matter

Anxious to learn whether anyone could honestly (and professionally) resist the wit and comedy in the Marx Brothers' new screen hit, "A Night at the Opera;" now showing at Loew's Fox Theater—the Fox management inserted an ad last Thursday in the Help Wanted Columns of The Post for applicants with "Sourpusses" (as they so bluntly expressed it). Those who didn't laugh after sitting through the picture were to be paid $5.

"We got about 28 calls asking for appointments," said the Fox office. Three men were selected to watch the picture. William P. Smith, of Alexandria, and Perry M. McPherson, of 1762 Columbia road northwest, didn't laugh and were paid $5. J. Garvey, of a transient bureau at 1600 Eckington Place, laughed and lost the $5.

Admiral, Baroness Tamm Arrive in Capital for Visit

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

An optical illusion on the part of this writer caused some excitement in the Navy Department yesterday, for at the musicale given Monday at the Hungarian Legation, the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom entered the music room, accompanied by a handsome couple who were thought by many to be Rear Admiral C. Fabian Tamm and Baroness Tamm, scheduled to arrive in Washington early this week. Unfortunately, it was not Admiral Tamm, but a gentleman not yet identified, who happened to enter the room with the Minister and his wife, therefore the admiral, who did not arrive in the Capital until last evening, received a bit of advance publicity.

Admiral and Baroness Tamm did arrive in the Capital for a visit of several days, and during their stay will be entertained by various personages. After their visit they will go to the West Coast, where Admiral Tamm will attend the fleet maneuvers. Baroness Tamm is a sister of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation—Baron Johan Beck-Friis—and she and her husband will be guests of the Minister and Mme. Bostrom during their stay.

Official Call Today.

Admiral Tamm is commander in chief of the Royal Swedish Navy, and today will make his official call on the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Claude A. Swanson. Later the admiral will pay his respects to the Assistant Secretary, Col. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, and the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William H. Standley. The admiral and his wife arrived in New York aboard the Gripsholm on November 22, and attended several official functions before coming to the Capital.

This evening the admiral and baroness will be the guests of honor at a dinner to be given by Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt, and on Friday the Minister and Mme. Bostrom will entertain at a dinner in honor of the visitors.

Today the Minister will give a men's luncheon for Admiral Tamm, and on December 3, a luncheon will be given in honor of the admiral by Rear Admiral Joseph Taussig, who will then be acting Chief of Naval Operations. The guests will include the Minister of Sweden, Baron Beck-Friis and many high-ranking officers of the United States Navy.

Standleys to Sail.

The Chief of Naval operations and Mrs. William H. Standley will go to New York on Friday and will sail that night aboard the Aquitania for Europe to attend the London Naval Conference, to which Admiral Standley has been appointed a delegate. The other delegates are the Undersecretary of State, Mr. William Phillips, and the United States Ambassador-at-Large, Mr. Norman Davis, who, with Mrs. Davis, will sail on the same ship. Therefore, the Assistant Chief of Operations, Admiral Taussig, will act as host to the distinguished visitor in the place of his chief.

Mrs. Standley decided only a few days ago to make the trip to England with her husband, and is in the midst of packing and shopping, besides the numerous official and social duties which she has to perform. She had planned to attend the Army and Navy football game on Saturday, but instead, the Navy Department will be represented by Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and a party of guests, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Taussig, who also will have guests with them.

On the eve of her departure for New York, Mrs. Standley will be in the receiving line at the Navy relief ball tomorrow evening, and instead of inviting guests to join her and the Admiral in their box, has turned it over to her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Edwin W. Herron, who will have with them a large group of members of the young married set of the Navy.

Officials' Wives Will Open Ball

Mrs. Swanson and Mrs. H. L. Roosevelt to Head Line at Willard.

Russell, wife of the Major General Commandant of the Marine Corps.

The introductions will be made by Lieut. Comdr. Lyman S. Perry, aid to Rear Admiral Defrees, and Lieut. Arthur Ayrault, aid to Admiral Standley.

Donations to the Washington Auxiliary of the Navy Relief Society and requests for reservations at the hall have been received from Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ernest King, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles B. McVay, the Office of Fleet Training; Capt. and Mrs. Isaac Yates, Commander and Mrs. Leo H. Bulgaria Envoy And Wife Return Minister Opened Exhibit of Native Sculpture and Painting in N. Y.

The Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff will return to Washington this evening from New York, where they have been for several days. On Sunday the Minister opened the display of Bulgarian contemporary paintings and sculpture and antique silver jewelry in the Gardens of the National Auditorium in Rockefeller Center. The exhibition is being sponsored by the American Bulgarian Institute and Rockefeller Center.

The exhibition includes oil paintings by Dimitri Gudjenov, Ivan Tabakov and Krustyo Chokanov. Almost all of them are landscapes of the Balkans. The pastoral landscapes of Gudjenov are especially pleasing with their play of cloud and sunlight on the Balkan hills and valleys. All three artists have a keen sense for composition and for color.

There is sculpture by Agop M. Agopoff, a graduate of Sofia Academy and the National Academy of Design, and winner for three successive years of the Grand Prize of the American Academy of Design. He exhibits traditional portrait busts of Firdausi, the epic poet of Persia; Will Rogers, Olin Downes, and others.

In contrast to the busts of Agapoff is the more impressionistic work of Athanas Katchamakoff, whose "Peasant Woman" is as solid and chunky as the square block of wood from which she was carved. Yet the graceful curves of the kneeling figure "Prayer" shows that he also can do work that is light and delicate.

The collection of antique silver jewelry, most of it from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, shows the work of the Bulgarian peasants. There are belt buckles, brooches, earrings and bracelets of intrinsic design and excellent workmanship. Though the pieces adhere to the same general patterns, each has received distinctive treatment in the details of the design.

The exhibition, which will be open until December 15, is presented under the patronage of the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Petroff, Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Junior Women's Club.

Miss Janet Coon, Washington whistler, and Miss Miriam Prettyman, Spanish dancer, will give a short program at the Thanksgiving Eve dance of the Junior Women's Club at 2400 Sixteenth street.

In compliment of Mme. Miss Margaret McNeale Makes Bow to Society

Grecian Delicacies, Costumes Mark Event Given by Debutante's Mother at Smoot Residence.

Mrs. Donald McNeale entertained at tea yesterday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Louis E. Smoot, when she presented her daughter, Miss Margaret Douglas McNeale, to society.

The debutante wore a gown of burnt rose moire, made on long lines with a round neckline and short puffed sleeves, and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses. Mrs. McNeale wore a gown of two shades of green velvet and a corsage of orchids.

Assisting the debutante were Senorita Amelita Alfaro, daughter of the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro; Miss Sally Mitchell LeFevre, Miss Jean Gilbert, Miss Frances Glover and Miss Ruth Tuckerman.

Those who assisted Mrs. McNeal at the tea were Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., Miss Theresa O'Sullivan, Mrs. William Reed, Mrs. Homer Fuller, Mrs. Robert Fuller, Mrs. James Saltzman, Mrs. Robert Fletcher, Mrs. Arthur Chichester and Miss Phoebe Fuller.

Miss McNeale's great-grandmother was of German birth, although she bore an English name, and during the afternoon several Greek customs were exhibited. Assisting debutantes served preserved rose leaves, a famous Grecian delicacy and tea, also a Greek cake, made from a recipe which has been in Mrs. Smoot's family for generations.

Of course you must cleanse and tone first, using Ardena Cleansing Cream and Skin Tonic. Together they're an unbeatable combination. Pouch of Silk In Bowl Keeps Powder Fresh Handsome Container Solves Wilting Box and Soiled Bureau Problem.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IF YOU'VE dabbled in face powder to any reckless extent you realize that even the most cleverly contrived packages are apt to go awry after a few weeks' use. The powder gets soiled from too much handling; it begins to cloud your dressing table drawer, or the box grows limp and discolored.

You have two courses. Pour your powder into a special jar or use it from a silken pouch.

One prominent beauty specialist allows you to do both in the beautifully arranged package of her de luxe face powder. In a French crystal bowl, copied from an objet d'art, rests a satin pouch with a draw string opening. Loosen the string, release the powder, dip in the puff, touch your face, draw the string tight and you have your powder problem well under control! No wilting box, no soiled bureau, and a face powder that will never grow less fragrant or less lovely from the day you buy it.

Incidentally you can use the bowl forever and place it on display with pride.

If the gift situation has you puzzled—here's a real idea!

Christmas Suggestion.

HERE'S ANOTHER idea for Christmas and one that's hard to beat—the bath sets scented with old English lavender! There's a stunning bottle of eau de cologne, a big box of dusting powder, smooth and fine as mist, a package of lavender meal that gives your bath the refreshing fragrance of lavender and softens the water, too. But wait, there's more! There are five cakes of a superb soap, also lavender scented.

Novel Evening Sets.

WHEN GREAT-AUNT and uncle go a-shopping for a bit of frivolity to present that gay and giddy little niece they'll be bound to see that the evening set is just the ideal thing. It consists of a small compact, designed to fit easily into a small evening purse, an attractive lipstick—and a cigarette case. And herein lies a tale. This case is not like others. Instead of being flat and opening bookwise, it is shaped like a small chest and is as gloriously ornamented as a king's treasure chest.

An Art in Perfumes.

THERE is an artist in perfumes who is also especially gifted in designing scrumptious packages. As a result, when you buy a bottle of his perfume, a box of his powder, or for that matter anything he sponsors you're sure to receive something truely elegant.

His newest perfume, Indiscreet, comes in a tall "draped" bottle of dull frosty glass. His talcum powder, bath powder, and face powder come in white plaster boxes, also gracefully "draped."

This perfumer, being thoroughly French, believes a woman should carry out her perfume through each detail of her toilet. Consequently he has accompanied his "Indiscreet" with these delicately and alluringly fragrant powders.

Cream for Oily Skins.

Women with oily skins will not use a night cream in many cases because they fear augmenting the condition. A certain beauty house, however, holds that such skins should be nourished and cared for as assiduously as others so they have come forward with a night cream prepared just for oily skins.

You use it to soften the skins, ward off chapping and wintry roughness, and also to float the small impurities out of the pores.

It is especially for those young women who find the years between 12 and 20 are not overly kind to their complexions.

Concert Career Routine, But Conductor Loves It

MLLE. EDITH LORAND.

Looking After 15 Men Is All in a Day's Work for Mlle. Lorand, Leader of Orchestra in Recent Appearance at Legation Here.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF THE AVERAGE woman can manage one man she feels proud of herself, but looking after 15 men is all in a day's work for Mlle. Edith Lorand, violin virtuoso and director of a Hungarian orchestra.

The tall, lean lady with dark hair and flashing eyes came to Washington recently for a performance at the Hungarian Legation, stayed over for a brief visit and left yesterday for Canada by way of New York, where she gave a performance yesterday afternoon.

After traveling all over Europe for the last six years with her Magyar musicians ("who are all highly educated and each a soloist in his own right"), she feels she has learned a good deal about men in general and men orchestra players in particular.

Between puffs on a Turkish cigarette she took a sip of tea, and between sippings she talked—of her work—her associates—the hospitality of Americans and their appreciation of Hungarian music—the price any artist pays for success.

Holidays Are Few.

She admitted, "even playing with, or in, an orchestra is work, hard work! Only one day in many months have we had a real holiday. We were so happy, like children. We went to the cinema and had a swell time. But the next day—and there's always a next day, you know—we had to practice twice as hard to make up for lost time. So it goes. We practice, and eat, and sleep, and play for an audience. We pack our bags and are off to fill the next engagement, where the routine repeats itself. Always the same thing, the same work, the same practice. But how we love it."

The men in her orchestra, she would like it understood, are not gypsies. "Why do Americans expect every musician from Hungary to be of Romany heritage? My men are from a higher level. They are university men. One is a doctor; another a lawyer; anohter a professor. All are as high class musicians as you'll find in the world."

She also made it clear her orchestra does not play gypsy music, but rather Hungarian rhapsodies and folk songs, classical dances and national dances. "You Americans have it all wrong," she continued, lifting her shoulders perceptibly and waving her hands like clothes drying in a brisk wind. "Hungarians never play gypsy music, but gypsies often play Hungarian music. See?"

No Time to Quarrel.

She confessed managing so many men was a bit difficult before she got the hang of it. "No, I have no trouble—well, not much, anyway. They are as eager to make our concerts a success as I am; and we all work so hard we haven't much strength or time left for quarreling."

The two married men in her orchestra grow moody more than the others, "thinking, of course, about their wives and children back home," she said.

Having no private life has also been inconvenient for her. "I haven't married because I've been too busy," she said. "Perhaps I shall never find the time. Who knows?"

And who knows what Mlle. Lorand will be doing this time next year, and the next or the next? "I don't," she admitted. "The future is another thing I don't have time to think about. The present—always the present—is enough for me."

Proud of Two Things.

Mlle. Lorand is obviously proud of two things; that she is the only woman violinist conductor in Europe, and that she has never played in a restaurant or night club. "My orchestra, having a woman leader is unique," she said. "So we get invitations to play everywhere. But I will not go to a coffee house. Not me, and not my men. We play only on the concert stage—not where people are eating and drinking."

Mlle. Lorand started her career as a violinist making recordings. They were so successful people began clamoring to see the "girl with the violin." In the meantime she had "recruited 15 men, musicians who could play as many different instruments as there are in a concert orchestra." Soon she was fiddling her way to fame and taking her 15 men on concert tours.

10 U.S. Women Listed in Paris Fashion Poll

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Half of the 20 best-dressed women in the world are Americans, in the opinion of the leading Paris dressmakers, an Associated Press poll showed today.

The best dressed woman, these experts believe, is Lady Mendl, the American-born former Elsie de Wolfe, now prominent in Paris society. Her husband, Sir Charles Mendl, is on the staff of the British Embassy in Paris.

The dressmakers said more women attempt to imitate her clothes than those of any other woman. They said she wears what suits her best, regardless of current fashion—and even sometimes colors her white hair light blue or green to match her gown.

There was no attempt to rank the 19 other women who made up the best-dressed group.

Three Actresses Listed.

The other Americans are:

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, New York social leader.

Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, the former Kitty Spottswood.

Mrs. Ernest Simpson, often seen with the Prince of Wales.

Mrs. Cole Porter, wife of the song writer.

Mrs. John Marriott, daughter of the late Otto Kahn.

Mrs. Gilbert Miller, wife of the American theatrical producer.

Ina Claire, actress.

Constance Bennett, actress.

Kay Francis, actress.

The ten other women listed are:

The Duchess of Kent (Greek by birth).

The Hon. Mrs. Reginald Fellowes (French).

Mme. Maria Jose Sert (Russian).

Mme. Martinez de Hoz (Argentine).

Princess Jean Louis de Faucigny Lucinge (French).

Countess Charles de Noailles (French).

Countess de Bauchamp (French).

Marquise De Paris (South American).

Spaghetti Dish Good Disguise For Leftovers

Satisfying and Inexpensive When Fixed With Cheese and Mushrooms.

By Dorothea Duncan.

SPAGHETTI prepared with a sauce which contains a bit of freshly ground or chopped left-over meat, a few sliced mushrooms or a liberal quantity of grated cheese is a favorite winter dish in many American households because it can be readily prepared and makes the basis for a delicious as well as satisfying and inexpensive meal. It is a dish that lends a perfect disguise for many leftovers.

The spaghetti casserole suggested for today's dinner is especially interesting from the nutritive standpoint. In the tomato sauce we find the ever-important source of vitamin C. The cheese offers protein, calcium and vitamins. The spaghetti itself forms a pleasant change from potatoes and the bacon adds a finishing savory touch.

Prepare the spaghetti first as usual by cooking it in a large quantity of boiling salted water. When tender drain and wash free from excess starch with a stream of cold water. Drain again. Simmer enough thick tomato soup (canned) with a slice of onion and one bay leaf to cover the spaghetti. Strain the tomato soup and season to taste with salt and pepper and a dash of tobasco sauce. Place the spaghetti in a casserole in layers and cover each layer with the tomato sauce and a generous sprinkling of grated American cheese. Continue until dish is filled and all ingredients are used, having a layer of sauce and grated cheese on top. Cover with strips of bacon. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) and bake until bacon is done and mixture is heated through.

Right Diet, Systematic Exercise Advised by Mme. Sylvia.

WOMAN'S BIGGEST problem is not getting a husband, but keeping one. Any girl with a hopechest heart can marry, but few persons can make a success of wedlock, thinks Madame Sylvia, formerly of Hollywood and now of New York; the woman who has changed the faces, figure and fortune of many an actress in filmdom and who has learned from observation and experience what makes marriages jell.

Coming to Washington on business and to interview Mrs. Roosevelt, she talked yesterday at a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club. Earlier in the day at her room in the Carlton she drew around her her dahlia and old-gold negligee (a gift from Norma Shearer), sat down to drink her coffee and gave a few hints on this business of holding a husband.

"It's a simple matter," said Sylvia (she prefers that you drop the "Madame"). "All the average woman has to do is to keep her figure—without 'talking diet'—and her sense of humor."

Lost Looks Means Ruin.

The first, she believes, is essential to any woman. "If you lose your looks you might as well be dead," she said. "Neither a satisfying philosophy nor a serene mind can make up for a pudgy, over-plushed body, a dry skin and lack-luster eyes. These are not necessarily telltale marks of age; they are direct results of those twin demons—carelessness and laziness.

"If a woman doesn't look up to snuff, she can't be happy. And if she isn't happy, she can't keep her sense of humor. So there you are. Lose your looks and you lose your husband. Oh, he may not wander off entirely. For all you know, he may never look at another woman. But you can be sure of one thing: he would—if he thought any pretty woman would look at him!"

Thus this amazing 54-year-old woman with soft golden hair, a pink and white skin and blue eyes that attest her Norwegian heritage settled this question of what makes men stray from the family hearthstone. But having delved to the source of the trouble, she called more of her colorful vocabulary into play, went a few steps further and pointed out, "Beauty can be any woman's for the asking—provided she asks in a spirit that implies determination, self-denial and plenty of work on her part. It's a matter of courage and will power. It means systematic exercise that stimulates the glands every day; it means editing your diet until you get the right food and not too many calories; it means knocking in the head all those 'ifs' that keep you from being attractive (those big hips, that protruding stomach, that bump at the top of the spine, that crepey neck and those sagging muscles at the jaw). It boils itself down to just one rule: Stop being lazy. Any woman who is on her toes enough to keep her looks and her sense of humor need have no fear of losing her husband. The worry will be on the other side of the house. Instead of bothering about his 'duty to the wife,' the husband will sweat about whether she's losing interest in him. It works."

She Knows No Failure.

A glance at Sylvia is proof enough this woman who is less than 5 feet tall and weighs 97 pounds, practices what she preaches. Her smooth, clear complexion would stand comparison with any girl's. Her sparkling eyes and her vitality attest her health, and her petite, well-proportioned figure is obviously the result of the right diet and proper exercise.

Further proof Sylvia knows what she is talking about may be found in any studio in Hollywood. She has smoothed out wrinkles, slapped out humps in the back, corrected bulging hips, fat calves and "extra tire" abdomens for most of the motion picture actresses and many of the actors. By her own admission and the word of countless patients, she has never failed yet. She abhors massage ("it relaxes you temporarily, but doesn't help in the long run") and warns against "the wholesale use of expensive creams and lotions and astringents." She advises "common sense diets and daily exercise that gets to the root of the trouble. It's a job that never ends, but it's worth all the trouble."

Mme. Sylvia's own dauntless spirit molded her own career, changed the entire course of her life, and caused success to rise, phoenix-like, from the ashes of adversity and unhappiness in her early married life.

So far, she has taken "two big chances in life. The first, when I moved with my two children to America," she said. "The other when I decided, at the age of 51, to marry a man 21 years younger than I am. From the way I see it now, I came out ahead on both counts."

Encouraging Artistic Bent Aids Children

SHOULD you have a lurking suspicion that part of your child's life is dormant or incomplete, you can find out by encouraging his artistic efforts. This opinion Florence Cane expressed in an article in this month's issue of the Parents' Magazine. Her belief is based on the theory that art functions in the life of the child in three ways, through his physical, mental and emotional life.

"If art were undertaken with as firm a realization of its importance to children as writing, spelling, geography and language, I believe we should soon see a different world," optimistically declared this lecturer on creative expression in New York University's School of Education. "People would be lifted above continuous commercialism, above the vibration of guns, above boredom or despair to a world of color, light and life."

However, if we are to rise above conditions that disturb or displease us, we must become as little children and satisfy our art impulse: must banish the thought that art is something to while away the hour, something to be smiled at. We will begin to take art reverently as a great reality, a necessity in man's soul by which he takes the constructive road rather than the destructive. The art impulse, whatever form it may take, very definitely is the God-given desire to create. And, in manner of speaking, in creating we pour oil upon our upheaved emotions.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE'VE FOUND something else to advocate. Black in the seventeenth century in several countries of Europe, a young man couldn't get married till he had planted nine walnut trees . . . this in order to increase the national wealth by securing a continuous supply of this valuable wood. We say that would be quite a nice idea here in America, what with walnut getting scarcer . . . anyway that would be one way to be sure that brides of the future will be able to have beautiful walnut furniture for their new homes.

And brides—as well as other ladies—love walnut furniture with good reason. For instance, a bride with a 180-pound husband thinks it would be nicest for her apartment because . . . She wants furniture that will be graceful yet not too delicate to fit her young man. So she chose walnut, combined it with colors that were also congenial to the two of them. First—the rug was an Oriental patterned design in glowing jewel tones, then applegreen walls, draperies in lemon yellow damask and chair coverings in wine and old rose tones . . . and for contrast one chair in substantial floral material that brought all the other colors in the room together. Accents of gilt in accessories were charming.

Strangers' Thanksgiving Dinner to Be Held at Shoreham Again This Year.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am submitting the following announcement to be published through your column.

Another Strangers' Dutch-Treat Thanksgiving Dinner will be held at the Shoreham Hotel Thursday evening, November 28, at 7:30 o'clock. The dinner, which is $2 a plate, not including tip, will be in the main dining room, where there is music and dancing and a floor show. Guests may assemble in the Garbo room at 7 o'clock to greet each other. Mrs. Caroline Daue will act as hostess. Reservations must be made in advance by calling "Robert" at the Shoreham, ADams 0700.

* * * *

There is nothing "back of" the Strangers' Thanksgiving Dinner except an idea. And that idea is to afford opportunity for single men and women and married couples to dine in a friendly group with others in preference to dining alone on Thanksgiving Day. Strangers and visitors in the city, as well as residents, will be welcomed.

* * * *

Thanking you for the interest you manifested in our first Strangers' Thanksgiving dinner held just a year ago, I am, very truly yours,

GRACE A. THOMPSON.

* * * *

DEAR MISS THOMPSON: Here is your announcement in print. I trust it may bring to the dinner a full attendance of interesting men and women who might otherwise spend a lonely Thanksgiving Day. I hope this year's dinner may be even better attended than that of 1934, which, as I recall, attracted a company of nearly 100 persons, and that all the guests will have equally as good a time as all reports credited them with having last year. I congratulate you again, not only on having conceived this splendid plan, but for your enterprise in keeping the idea alive. M. H.

Needs Money to Live.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: An old neighbor of mine has some silver he must sell . . . and hasn't an idea how to go about it. He needs the money to live on but the need isn't urgent enough to make him put it up at auction. How can we find out how much to ask for each piece? It has been appraised but not to my satisfaction . . . After it has been priced, how could we sell it? If you can offer any suggestions we will be so grateful. Sincerely, L. C.

* * * *

DEAR L. C.: The curator of ethnology at the National Museum, Mr. H. W. Krieger, would be willing to tell this man whether his silver pieces are authentic and valuable and to direct him where to go to sell them. He would not attempt to quote prices, however. Mr. Krieger can be found in Room 390 of the Museum, which is at Constitution avenue and Tenth street northwest. The telephone number is NAtional 1810.

Cancer Period Usually Starts At Age of 40

Special Precautions Against Any Kind of Irritation to Body Advised.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE subject of cancer is scarcely one that would be considered edifying at a dinner party. Nevertheless, we must talk about it because precautions on the part of the public will reduce the incidence of the disease and save lives. One phase of the subject was presented in yesterday's article with the plea that we become cancer-wise and at the same time, cancer-sensible. The disease is probably increasing and, on the whole, it constitutes our most serious menace to health.

Cancer is not contagious. There is no danger of catching the disease through nursing a cancer patient or by living in the same house. There would be about as much chance of contracting cancer through contact as there would be of catching a broken leg.

There is, however, a hereditary tendency to cancer. If parents or grandparents have suffered from cancer it is a fair warning to children and grandchildren that special precautions should be taken to avoid irritations in all parts of the body. These persons should make certain, by periodic examinations, that they show a clean bill of health. But just because grandfather or grandmother may have suffered from cancer does not mean that a single descendant will ever develop the disease.

Irritations, persistent and long continued, of any type may bring about an overgrowth of cells. At first this may appear to be simply a protective mechanism on the part of the body. Later, however, if the cells increase at a rapid rate, true cancer may develop. A broken tooth may lead to constant irritation of the tongue or the inside of the cheek. As a result the patience of the delicate cells becomes exhausted, overgrowth takes place and cancer may follow. It is well known that coal tar, if rubbed into the skin over too long a period, may prove sufficiently irritating to cause skin cancer.

Men Breadwinners Warned of Burden In Ousting Women

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Grandfather's burden is awaiting the masculine breadwinner if feminine job holders are ousted generally, Miss Charl O. Williams, of Washington, asserted today. The president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women said she believed that before furthering any move to force women who marry or have babies to give up jobs the opposite sex should ask itself:

"Are modern men willing to resume the task of supporting a host of female relatives—grandmothers, maiden aunts, grown-up daughters, about-to-be-divorced sisters with children, mothers-in-law, as well as wives?"

"Even the men should want to assume the financial responsibility of their women relatives, and possibly their wives' relatives, too," she added, "could they earn enough to do it?"

Fight on Rail Crossings Opens In Kensington School Tonight

Commerce Chamber to Urge Prompt Action by State; Equalization With District on Gasoline Rates Also Sought.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST,
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

The opening gun in a new campaign to secure immediate elimination of the railroad grade crossing in Kensington (Md.) will be fired tonight at a meeting of the local chamber of commerce in the Kensington elementary school.

Washington I. Cleveland, president of the chamber, announced yesterday that a resolution urging immediate action by the State roads commission will be presented at tonight's meeting and the matter will be pressed before the commission.

An allocation of $145,000 was made by PWA for the elimination about one year ago. Delay in commencing the project has been blamed by the State roads commission on difficulties encountered in securing rights of way from owners of property over which the proposed approach to the northern end of the elimination will pass.

"Investigations of the chamber fail to disclose that local landowners have been consulted by representatives of the commission," Cleveland declared in refuting this claim.

Additional resolutions to be presented tonight include elimination of traffic hazards in the community, with especial emphasis on the Connecticut Avenue Bridge at Rock Creek, the intersection of the Kensington-Wheaton road with the Viers Mill road, and the Forest Glen intersection.

A report also is expected from the public utilities committee dealing with recommendations of the chamber regarding bus transportation and equalization of gas rates with those in Washington.

W. C. Albrecht, chairman of the board of supervisors of elections of Baltimore, and Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, of Takoma Park, will discuss the advantages of voting machines and give a demonstration of the manner in which they operate.

The Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park will hold its annual dance tomorrow night at the Indian Spring Country Club. Prominent county officials and civic leaders, headed by State Senator and Mrs. Stedman Prescott, are serving as patrons and patronesses.

A force of PWA workers has been alloted the Takoma Park (Md.) Library Association to assist in repairing and binding books in the library, corner of Carroll and Ethan Allen avenues.

It was through the efforts of Miss Adelene Pratt, chairman of the Maryland public library advisory commission, that the force was granted. Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, president of the association, urges all persons who intend to give books to do so at this time so they can be repaired. The library now has approxiately 2,500 books but it still desires more children's books.

An art exhibit by Miss Helen Townsend, art instructor of McFarland Junior High School, is now on display. According to Mrs. Pratt there will be an exhibit covering paintings, etchings, sculpture, pressed flowers, shawls and other collections every two weeks.

Mrs. Ida Mae Nutter, 54, 624 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was granted an absolute divorce from Edwin R. Nutter, 812 Hollins street, Boltimore, Md., in the Circuit Court for Montgomery County at Rockville, Md., yesterday.

The petition stated that the couple was married on November 2, 1902, at Battle Creek, Mich., and have one child, over 21 years old. The plaintiff charged misconduct.

The decree was granted by Judge Charles W. Woodward, and the defendant was ordered to pay the costs of the suit.

A community Thanksgiving service will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. in the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church, Md. The pastor, the Rev. Ralph D. Smith, will conduct the services and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. Wesley Loftis, pastor of the Silver Spring Baptist Church. Special music will be rendered.

Miss Lavinia Engle, director of the Maryland League of Women Voters, told members of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Silver Spring and the Young Woman's Democratic Club of that area that the coming election in 1936 will be waged on different theories of government rather than mere party politics as in past elections. She explained the various phases of the social security program, declaring that "as a social and economic philosophy it carries out the theory of government as we know it in America—that is, free opportunity and security for all."

Forest Glen Council, Knights of Columbus, has organized a Big Brothers' Club to provide Christmas cheer for unfortunate youngsters in the community whose parents are unable to provide a tree or toys. The work of the club is not limited to color or creed, but all worthy cases will be investigated. The club will function throughout the year and plans to administer aid in any emergency, but will reserve most of its funds to take care of children at Christmas.

The annual Thanksgiving community service of Takoma Park will be held tomorrow morning at the Takoma Park Baptist Church, corner Piney Branch road and Aspen street, Takoma Park, D. C., at 10:30. The affair, held each year at a different church, is for the public but arranged especially for residents of both Takoma Park, Md., and Takoma, D. C.

The Rev. William E. La Rue, pastor, will preside at the service, during which a musical program will be rendered by the church choir and chorus under the direction of Mrs. Isabelle P. Middlehauff, organist. F. B. Linton, leading citizen of Takoma Park and a member of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, will deliver President Roosevelt's proclamation. The Thanksgiving prayer will be offered by the Rev. W. H. Pinkerton, pastor of Takoma Christian Church, while the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, will preach the sermon.

Fight on Water Breaks Anew In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The differences between the city council and the Alexandria Water Co. came to the fore again last night in council meeting, during discussion of a resolution to appropriate $600 for the installation of three fire hydrants in Braddock Heights, section 2.

The charter of the water company provides that water mains sufficient to provide "adequate" fire protection shall be installed. The fire chief claims that no less than a six-inch main will furnish adequate fire protection. The water company, according to City Engineer McCartney, applied for a permit to lay six-inch and two-inch mains in this section. A permit was granted for the six-inch mains but refused for the two-inch, but the company proceeded to lay the two-inch mains. The appropriation was approved, with the proviso that the hydrants be installed on six-inch mains.

The city attorney stated that the State Corporation Commission apparently is the only tribunal which could decide what "adequate" fire protection would consist of, and intimated that should the city council attempt to define the word, the water company might then apply to the corporation commission for a water rate to compensate it for additional outlay to increase its facilities.

Hints Purchase of Company.

Mayor Davison stated it is his belief the council water committee will soon be able to submit a report which will clarify the situation or, if not, it may be necessary, in his opinion, to take over the water company and operate it as a municipally-owned utility.

The city manager submitted a communication from the chief of the fire department, recommending installation of 12 fire hydrants in certain sections, at a cost of $1,440. This was referred to the water committee. An appropriation of $960 was made for installation of eight hydrants in Beverly Hills.

The election of a member of the school board to succeed T. Wilfred Robinson, whose membership on the board was terminated when he removed from the city, was held over.

Dental Bill Held Up.

A bill of $50 for dental work for Mrs. W. J. Greenan, allegedly made necessary on account of injuries received by her in a fall at the Jefferson School building, was referred to the city attorney for an opinion as to the city's liability. Mrs. Greenan claimed her injuries were caused by unsafe conditions at the school building.

James Henderson, jr., appeared before the council to urge that the 600 block North Alfred street be improved. The city manager was instructed to install curb and gutter, and to make street improvements later, when weather conditions swould permit this work.

A schedule of routes desired by the A., B. & W. Transit Co., a bus line, was referred to the traffic board.

A petition requesting passage of an ordinance permitting amateur basketball games in the Armory on Sunday afternoons was held over to permit residents of that section to express an opinion.

Sewer Is Approved.

Considerable discussion was caused when the city manager presented a communication regarding the diversion of a water course from the property of Thomas Carter, at West street and Braddock road. He was instructed, by a resolution, to construct a sewer from West street to a culvert in Braddock road, in accordance with the city attorney's understanding with Mr. Carter that the latter would give the city an easement across his property for the purpose of laying this sewer. The city attorney had expressed the opinion that Carter had no right to divert this water, while some councilmen took the opposite view.

Park Bell, representing Robert Bell's Sons, printers, appeared to protest the award of steel lockers for the George Washington High School to an out-of-town firm, stating that a resolution had been adopted by the council requiring purchase of such supplies from local firms. Although several councilmen recalled the adoption of such a resolution, no record of it apparently existed, and Bell was informed that since the contract had already been let and the lockers ordered no action could be taken.

The Sixth Ward Citizens Association has gone on record in favor of State legislation legalizing horse racing in Virginia, local option of Sunday movies, and opposing the automobile inspection fee of 50 cents. The association also favors having the State law amended so that poll taxes may be paid 30 days prior to election, instead of six months.

Dr. A. B. Graham, from the extension service of the Department of Agriculture, will be the guest speaker at the annual Thanksgiving joint luncheon of the Alexandria Kiwanis, Rotary and Lions Clubs, at 12:30 o'clock today in the George Mason Hotel. The Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, pastor of the First Baptist Church and a member of the Rotary Club, also will give a short talk.

The Alexandria Baking Corporation has been granted a charter by the State corporation commission. The purpose of the company is to engage in the general baking business, the maximum capital stock to be 500 shares and the minimum 10 shares. Officers are Clype R. Graham, of Alexandria, president; Earl E. Goss, of Washington, vice president; Michael Fields, of Washington, treasurer; Earl E. Goss, of Washington, secretary. These officers are included in the board of directors.

The funeral of Edward M. Allen, 58, of Richmond, who died in the Alexandria hospital Saturday after being struck by a hit-and-run driver, will be held on Friday from the Wheatley funeral home, 809 King street, and burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery. Allen was a Spanish-American War veteran.

Ground Broken For Masonic Hospital in Va.

Gift of Alexandria Couple Expected to Be Ready During February.

Announcement has been made that ground was broken on Monday for a hospital at the Masonic Home of Virginia, located at Highland Springs, 7 miles east of Richmond, the gift of Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett, of Alexandria, donated as a memorial to their youngest son, Robert South Barrett 3d, who died in infancy.

The Rev. Thomas W. Hooper, D. D., grand master of Masons in Virginia, broke the ground in the presence of a large number of grand lodge officials and the 250 children residents of the home.

The building will be a fireproof structure, of brick and steel, 36 by 50 feet in size, the general design to conform to that of other buildings within the grounds, and the cost is to be $15,000. The first floor will house the offices of the physician, with small operating room attached; nurses' room with private bath; diet kitchen, reception room and four private bedrooms. On the second floor will be four wards, two for girls and two for boys, with bathrooms, linen closets, etc.

The work will be pushed rapidly and the corner stone is expected to be laid on December 7 by the officers of the grand lodge. The dedication is planned for February while the grand lodge is in annual session in Richmond.

Dr. Barrett is the oldest son of the late Rev. Dr. Robert South Barrett, dean of the Episcopal Cathedral in Atlanta, Ga., and the late Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, for many years president of the National Florence Crittendon Mission. He is past master of Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, this city, and a thirty-third degree Mason, and chairman of grand lodge committees.

Group Shuns Added Taxes For District

$3,000,000 Additional to Proposed Levies Will be Needed.

Suggested Sources of Revenue Are Studied by Committee.

A program of future expenditures by the District based on less than the suggested "big four" sources of additional revenue will be recommended by the special District tax committee, it appeared, following a meeting yesterday.

The "big four" cited by the Commissioners for study by the committee are revised and increased public utilities taxes, increased gasoline tax, automobile weight tax, and an inheritance tax, estimated to produce $4,350,000 additional revenue annually.

On the basis of a program of capital expenditures at the rate of $10,000,000 a year in the future, considered essential by some committee members, it would be necessary to raise some $3,000,000 a year in addition to these new taxes to meet proposed expenditures, including operating and maintenance costs, which have been mounting at the rate of about $1,000,000 a year.

Utility Law Favored.

Alarmed by these figures, committee members are shying away from recommending such a program. Apparently some new taxes are to be recommended. One most likely to be suggested is the inheritance tax, estimated to yield $600,000 a year, now collected by the Federal Government. There is strong support for revision and increase in utilities taxes. The revised taxes are estimated to yield $1,500,000 a year.

There is opposition, however, to the suggested increase in gasoline tax and the automobile tax. The latter is an additional levy on automobile owners. It is estimated to yield $1,500,000 a year. A 1-cent increase in the gas tax would yield $750,000 a year.

Aside from informal opinions, the committee has reached no conclusions as to what its recommendations to the Commissioners shall be.

"We've got to cut our suit to fit our cloth," one member said. "We have not yet determined to our own satisfaction just how much cloth we have."

Federal Increase Sought.

Some members of the committee believe they can persuade Congress to increase the annual Federal appropriation, and are counting on such an increase to bring the total for operation of the District near their estimates of future needs. Other committee members are convinced there is no likelihood getting an increase in the Federal appropriation under present conditions.

Increase of the Federal allotment from the $5,700,000 appropriated this year to $8,317,000—the average over the last ten years—has been asked in the 1937 District estimates now before the Federal Budget Bureau. The Commissioners have asked the Bureau to at least let the figure go to Congress. Whether it gets to Congress or not, the bureau intends to put the question up to President Roosevelt, it is said. Privately District officials, including the Commissioners, have little hope of having the appropriation increased.

Other sources of revenue than the four taxes are not seriously considered, it was said by one committee member.

The committee is to meet again on Friday morning in the office of E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel and committee chairman. Other members are William A. Roberts, people's counsel; Daniel J. Donovan, auditor; Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, and Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Diplomats Start Christmas Seal Drive

Envoys Aid as Drive Opens For Sale of Christmas Seals

7 Ambassadors, Ministers, Describe International Progress of Movement Begun in 1904 to Combat "White Scourge"—Tuberculosis.

Seven ambassadors and ministers last night lent the prestige of their countries to the annual international drive for funds to fight the white scourge of mankind, as the twenty-ninth sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals was opened officially in the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In short five-minute talks the Ambassadors of France, China and Brazil, and the Ministers of Denmark, the Union of South Africa, Austria and the Irish Free State sketched the progress being made against this dread disease in their own countries and urged the hundred persons present to help make this year's drive for funds more successful than ever.

Today 2,000 city and county units of the National Tuberculosis Association will place in the mails millions of penny Christmas seals for delivery to homes throughout the country Friday morning. The funds collected will be used for a program of clinics, nursing service, tuberculin testing of children, X-raying, preventoriums, rehabilitation, education and medical and social research.

Keynote Sounded.

Sounding the keynote of the meeting, Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association, said:

"Tuberculosis Christmas seals have linked together 44 nations around the world in a gigantic effort to save human life and to prevent unnecessary suffering from a communicable disease that can be easily arrested in its early stages."

Ambassador Andre de Laboulaye, of France, described in detail the sale of Christmas seals in his own country, which annually brings in 20,000,000 francs. Oswaldo Aranha, Ambassador of Brazil, said that 86,000 people died in his country last year from the disease, which, he explained, "was brought into Brazil by European explorers and settlers."

Otto Wadsted, Minister of Denmark, told how the drive in his country had led to the lowest death rate from tuberculosis in Europe. He also paid his tribute to Einar Holboell, the obscure Danish postmaster whose dream in 1904 led to the world-wide sale of Christmas seals.

A little playlet, "A Postmaster's Dream," depicting the beginning of this movement in the imagination of the Danish postmaster, was presented by the Travel Club of the Gordon Junior High School, directed by Elizabeth Draper and Audrey Rout. Children dressed in the costumes of nine different nations with large letters on their backs stamped with the seal, took part.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer of the District, pointed out that the anti-tuberculosis fight in this country since the beginning of the century had saved the lives of two million persons who would otherwise have been its victims.

Turning to the local situation, Dr. Ruhland reminded his audience that Washington has the second largest death rate from this disease among the cities of the Nation, and that tuberculosis kills twice as many persons as automobiles every year.

"True," he said, "the high mortality is in some degree due to the large Negro population here. But the deaths in this city are in a ratio of six Negroes to one white person, while the national ratio is only 2 to 1. Such a situation in Washington is a national disgrace."

Throngs View 4-Alarm Fire In Paint Store

Oil-Fed Flames Imperil Reilly Building on New York Ave.

Fireman Is Overcome Twice; Damage Is Put at $5,000.

The basement of the Hugh Reilly paint store at 1334 New York avenue northwest was swept last night by a fire that brought out 24 pieces of fire apparatus, summoned by four alarms.

The screaming of fire sirens and a dense smoke that poured from the narrow three-story building and filled the street attracted at least 3,000 persons to the scene from nearby restaurants and theaters.

Pvt. J. J. Riggs, acting as captain in charge of No. 16 engine company, was overcome twice by smoke. He was one of the first to enter the smoke-choked basement, going in without a mask. Fellow firemen found it necessary to help him to the street. Revived by the night air, he returned to duty and a few minutes later was overcome a second time. He also suffered a cut on his hand.

Flames Fed By Oil.

The flames burned furiously, fed by hundreds of gallons of linseed oil and turpentine stored in the basement, and for a time the fire seemed certain to work its way to floors above. Flames seeped through to the first floor in two places in the rear, but firemen were able to keep them from reaching thousands of gallons of paint and other inflammables stored in the upper portion of the building and, according to Francis G. Thomas, president of the company, valued at about $200,000.

Smoke rolled into the offices of the receiver of the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., at 1336 New York avenue, and smoke and water flowed into the Rudolph & West hardware store, at 1332 New York avenue, where about five years ago a fireman was killed fighting a four-alarm blaze.

Traffic Re-Routed.

Police blocked off traffic on New York avenue between Fifteenth and Thirteenth streets and as far south as F street, jamming trolley and auto travel for nearly an hour on these principal downtown thoroughfares.

The first alarm was turned in by Private P. J. Jordan, the traffic policeman at New York avenue and Fourteenth street. The three alarms following were turned in at the direction of fire chiefs.

Chief Fire Engineer Charles E. Schrom estimated the damage at $5,000, though officials of the company were unable to make a complete check of their loss. The cause could not be determined last night.

Road Contract Given To Corson and Gruman

Contract for improvement of Fort Drive, northwest, from Chesapeake street to Nebraska avenue, was awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to Corson and Gruman, of Washington, low bidder, for $37,263.

D. C. Powerless To Clamp Code On Tavern Men

The District Commisssioners are without authority to compel holders of liquor licenses to subscribe to a prescribed standard of wages and hours and working conditions, Roland M. Brennan, secretary of the Board of Commissioners, has informed Charles E. Sands, executive secretary of the Bartenders' Union.

"It seems to us," Sands had written to the Commissioners, "the height of inconsistency for thousands of workers to be on relief being paid money by the Federal and the District governments when the employers are permitted to exploit labor.

"I believe that as a condition toward obtaining a license to sell liquor it would be perfectly legal and proper for the applicant to subscribe to working days and working hours for employes that would greatly reduce the number of jobless in the District.

"While the restaurant code was in force and effect, more restaurants opened in the District of Columbia than in any previous year. These employers when they opened knew, and, I assume, were prepared to conform to, the American standards of wages as promulgated in the restaurant code.

"If the restaurateurs who sell liquor or beer were forced to adhere to such a code they would be doing nothing more than they were forced to do under the restaurant code.

"Persons engaged in the sale of liquor, a privilege granted to them by the Commissioners, certainly have no more right in an attempt to work employes 7 days a week and hours in excess of 54 per week."

"I am quite sure," Brennan replied, "you will agree the Commissioners have been diligent in regulating the licensees and enforcing the health regulations as well.

"Strict compliance with health regulations by proprietors of cafes and restaurants with regard to sanitary conditions will be required. Of this you and the public may be assured.

"The powers granted the Commissioners under the act do not, it is believed, empower the Commissioners to go so far as you suggest. In other words, the adoption of any such regulation, policy or ruling by the Commissioners would be a forbidden step in the legislative direction and abuse of the power and authority conferred upon them by Congress."

Strike Called By Elevator Constructors

Walkout Comes As Feud With Electricians Flares Again.

Work Slowed Up on New Acacia Insurance Headquarters.

A long-standing feud between the elevator constructors' and electricians' unions burst into the open again yesterday, resulting in virtually every working member of the former organization in Washington being called out on strike.

For years the elevator men and electrical workers have been at odds over the installation of electric signal devices in elevators, each union claiming jurisdiction. The local strike was ordered to hasten a showdown, according to John Proctor, business agent, and John F. Herrity, international officer of the elevator constructors' organization.

The walkout affects all members of the local except those engaged in maintenance or inspection work. Herrity estimated the number at 75. One of the largest projects affected is the new Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Building facing the Capitol plaza. No Government jobs of a major nature are involved, although elevator construction in the new Interior Building is scheduled to start soon.

Among the elevator companies hit by the strike are Otis, Westinghouse, A. B. See and Haughton. Both Proctor and Herrity emphasized that the union's argument is not with them but with its building trade rivals, the electricians.

A conference yesterday between company and union representatives failed to bring a decision. Other meetings are planned, said Herrity, who characterized the dispute as a "misunderstanding."

"This is a retaliatory move to bring another union to its senses," he said, denying that the elevator constructors are claiming anything that belongs to the electricians. He admitted that "one or two" companies have agreements with the electrical workers stipulating that signal devices shall be installed by that trade.

The strike was called by the union local and not by the Washington Building Trades Council, which ordered a walkout Monday of all union tradesmen employed at the new Archives Building. The latter dispute, also jurisdictional and involving iron workers, carpenters and laborers, centers around the installation of book stacks. Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, was drafted yesterday by the Treasury Department to help effect a solution.

Miss Stanwyck and Mr. Colman Hit Film Bullseyes, But Aim at Different Targets

Their Pictures Reveal Unusual Types of Merit

Are Previewed by Critics; 'Scandals' Here Dec. 9; Theater Chatter.

By Nelson B. Bell.

In the cavernous and dimly lighted expanses of Meakin's practically depopulated RKO-Keith Theater, Monday midnight, a small group of inquisitive night owls watched Miss Barbara Stanwyck, momentarily impersonating a fabulous young woman by the name of Annie Oakley, shatter an unbelievable number of glass balls, snip cigarets in two while held in the lips of hazardous daredevils and flip small coins from between the fingers of equally intrepid adventurers, all with the unerringly aimed bullets of a reasonably high-powered rifle.

Yesterday afternoon, the same curious contemplators of the celluloid scene gathered in the projection room of the Fox Film Exchange to view the latest demonstration of Mr. Ronald Colman's gentlemanly flair for urbane comedy and repressed romance. In spite of the fact that Mr. Colman and his associates scored many bull's-eyes, the two pictures—the one opening on Fifteenth street tonight at 9:50; the other at Loew's Fox, come Friday—needless to say, are poles apart.

Each in its respective field is entitled to respectful attention—"Annie Oakley" because it is unique among recent screen releases; "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo" because it presents its star in lighter vein than usual and affords certain peculiarities of plot that will prove less transparent than the casual spectator at first suspects.

Was Unique Figure.

Born to the family name of Mozee—Phoebe Annie Oakley Mozee was her full name—at Woodland, Darke County, Ohio, on August 13, 1866, Annie Oakley, as the late Will Rogers once wrote, was destined to have her likeness on more billboards and be known for her prowess in more world capitals than a modern star on the cinema. She was the uncannily accurate rifle shot who brought a fame almost equal to his own to Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

A small, acidulous, fragile little woman at the time I remember her best, Annie Oakley could perform more miracles of marksmanship than anybody of her time, not excluding the champion male rifle shots with whom she willingly competed, and from whom she usually won.

The first episode in the picture opening on the Keith screen tonight is a slightly fictionized reproduction of her first competitive rifle match in Cincinnati, promoted by a hotel man who had purchased the surplus quail she had brought down because they were never riddled by potshots, but always neatly drilled through the head with rifle bullets. That, ladies and gentlemen, is marksmanship!

The name of her actual competitor in this shoot was Butler, instead of the Toby Taylor of the film, and Annie won by one point, instead of throwing the match to save the other contestant his job as a star "act," as the gelatin drama represents.

Met Royalty Abroad.

Later in her career, Annie won the admiration of Europe's most distinguished royalty—executing a few social blunders that are concededly authentic and so made a part of the action of the picture.

Col. William Frederick Cody, "Buffalo Bill," famous Indian scout and buffalo hunter, principally to provide fresh meat for the labor camps throwing the first railroad across the continent, necessarily is a pivotal figure in the life story of Annie Oakley. He is impersonated on the screen by Moroni Green, recently seen as Porthos in "The Three Musketeers," a tall and straight giant of a fellow, who looks a great deal more like the hero of every small boy's imagination than he acts.

In its reflection of the "backstage" operation of the celebrated "Bill show," "Annie Oakley" is realistic to one who has been privileged to view that aspect of the great "Wild West" exhibition that never again can be duplicated.

Real Indians assume the characters of the famous old chiefs, Rain-in-the-Face and Sitting-Bull, the leader of the Sioux at the Custer massacre on the Little Big Horn.

To a generation that has grown up since Buffalo Bili and his show passed from the living scene, "Annie Oakley" should supply a new note in melodramatic entertainment, even if some of their elders will wish that the romance between Annie and her Toby might have been a little more tightly riveted than Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster seem able to manage in their sketchily drawn roles of the play's major figures.

Colman is Quietly Amusing.

And now, to get around belatedly to the debonair and impeccable Mr. Colman—as "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," and went back later almost to repeat the lucky phenomenon—here is a punctiliously pictured light romance from the same piece of dramatic fabric as "By Candlelight." It is a deftly turned and quietly amusing game of battledore and shuttlecock between a fallen member of the former Czaristic nobility and an obscure dancer, set on his trail to lead him back to the gaming tables at Monte Carlo where the chagrinned gentlemen, relying upon the percentages ostensibly in their favor, may recoup their losses to the strange young chap who once won 10,000,000 francs and then never would play again.

Everything that the picture attempts, and all that it achieves, doesn't amount to a row of dramatic pins in dramaturgic importance. It pretends to be nothing beyond a playful and exquisitely polished romp, which, after all, ought to be sufficient recommendation for the gay week following the festive and happy gormandizing of November's prandial holiday. On the screen at Loew's Fox on Friday, this one.

One suspects that Mr. Colman was dropped into the name role of this lengthily titled subject as a sort of "breather" to offset the more arduous duties devolving upon him in Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities," in which he portrays the splendid role of Sidney Carton.

Or perhaps it wass, as he pretends in the picture, merely to be near Joan Bennett. As charming as she is in this one, that would be aim, accomplishment and reward enough!

Speaking of "Annie Oakley"—as we were in a few thousand more or less well-chosen words—Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's, is in receipt of the following self-explanatory note:

"Dear sir. My name is Annie Oakley and I would like to get an Annie Oakley to see 'Annie Oakley' when it comes to your theater. I am 12 years old and go to Gordon Junior High School. I hope to hear from you. Yours truly, (Signed) ANNIE OAKLEY."

I have a well-defined suspicion that Annie is going to get her hope!

Some "Scandals" Mongering.

Hot on the heels of George H. Atkinson and Karl Bernstein, as the saying goes—although he isn't overheated and has nothing whatever to do with their Achillean extremities—comes Nate Nathan, heralding the increasing virtues of George White's "Scandals," which will be popping into the National the week of Monday, December 9, immediately following Vinton Freedley's "Anything Goes," the object of the exploiteering talents of the Messrs. Atkinson and Bernstein.

Mr. White's "Scandals," it will be recalled, was premiered in Richmond a matter of a comparatively few weeks ago and has been traveling the countryside since, being subject to a constant accretion of modifications, substitutions and improvements, calculated to make it the peer of the best Mr. White heretofore has done on the side of gargantuanly gorgeous girls-and-music shows. The "Scandals" now is, or are, as the case may be, said to approximate that happy state.

Staged First One Here.

So Mr. White, remembering that the first edition of the "Scandals" he ever sponsored was accorded its pre-New York premiere in the National Theater in Washington, is bringing his present opus to the same stage to make sure that the National Capital shall pass judgment first upon the production concerning which Manhattan, a little later, is expected to rave and run a flaming fever.

The show is reputedly tremendously "hopped up" since the evening of its Richmond baptism. Many new faces appear in the cast.

Also, several of the originals remain, including Gracie Barrie, one of Washington's favorite singers and most popular persons.

More of this after Mr. Nathan has dropped in this afternoon.

Mr. Frank Harvey, writing on the letterhead of the Raleigh Hotel, is intensely annoyed that I was unable to share his ecstacy over Mr. E. M. Newman's Traveltalk on the topic of "Italy" last Sunday afternoon.

He attributes my failure to see eye-to-eye with him to considerations and motives that are as remote from fact as they are nebulous in concept. It was merely that Mr. Newman, for one of the few times in his career, seemed to me a little less apt than the possibilities of his subject matter afforded reasonable excuse to expect.

It is my anticipation that in a subject of such lively contemporary interest as "Ethiopia," Mr. Newman, next Sabbath, will excel what I doubt if he himself deems one of his happiest excursions to far places.

In the meantime, I trust Mr. Harvey's wounds will heal quickly and completely and leave no permanent scars upon a nature of obvious erudition, if occasionally impulsive judgments.

Holiday Hopping About.

To keep the record straight, it may be well to set down once again a brief resume of the "staggered" openings of the new film bills scheduled for the Thanksgiving week-end.

"Annie Oakley" will begin its run on the screen at RKO-Keith's at a special holiday eve preview at 9:50 o'clock tonight, following the final projection, at 7:45, of Ginger Rogers and George Brent in "In Person." Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster are the featured leads in "Annie Oakley."

This morning at 11:30 the engagement of George Arliss in "Mr. Hobo" will begin at the Belasco. This is a Gaumont-British production and marks a considerable departure from its star's usual type of characterization.

Bert, Bob and Dot Tomorrow.

Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey, supported as usual by Dorothy Lee, will open their engagement in "The Rainmakers" on the screen at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater tomorrow, as a special concession to holiday amusement-seekers who go in for comedy in a big, or three-ply, way.

As this is written, at something after 10 Tuesday night, there is still indecision in the New York camp of Loew's, Inc., as to whether "Mutiny on the Bounty"—which is scoring one of the biggest second weeks in the history of the house—shall be continued a third week at Loew's Palace, beginning Friday, or withdrawn in favor of Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The Crusades," recently seen as a "road show" attraction at the National.

If "Mutiny" is supplanted, it will not be because of any lack of patronage, but because pictures are "backing up" on the Loew booking sheets to a point where they will have to be moved promptly—or else! So now you know.

What's-in-a-Name Note.

Those who contemplate the convivial spectacle of Walter Connolly, as the master of the Bedford Plantation, in the Paramount picturization of the Stark Young novel opening at the Earle Theatre on Friday, imbibing double mint juleps, to which he constantly urges his faithful house servant to add "six rattles and a button," may suspect that Mr. Connolly misunderstood the name of "So Red the Rose."

All the prima facie evidence seems to be on the side of his having understood it to be, "So Red the Nose."

One of the Bourbon kings, no less.

'Iron Duke' Becomes a Vagabond!

George Arliss, who has impersonated many of history's great, among them Disraeli, Alexander Hamilton, Baron Rothschild, Voltaire and the Duke of Wellington, in his latest adventure in celluloid becomes a kindly and a lowly "knight of the road." The title of his new Gaumont British vehicle is "Mr. Hobo," a self-explanatory bit of naming, if ever there was one. "Mr. Hobo," in which Mr. Arliss is shown at left, above, opens as the holiday feature on the screen of the Belasco Theater this morning, instead of with the customary late-evening preview.

Women 'Excel' In Will to Kill, Hoover Asserts

Head of U. S. Agents Declares Homicidal Tendencies Surpass Males.'

By the Associated Press.

Government agents are in sympathy with the mystery story detective who stares knowingly at his pipe and says: "Cherchez la Femme."

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, yesterday revealed statistics which showed that while only 6.9 per cent of the persons arrested in the United States during October were women, the women arrested showed a greater tendency toward murder.

"Generally speaking, the tendency of members of the female sex to commit crimes of violence against the person was more pronounced than in the case of the male," Hoover said.

More than 9 out of every 100 women arrested were charged with homicide, he explained, while only 8 out of every 100 men were charged with the same offense.

Public's Aid Asked.

The Government asked the aid of public and police in experiments with a super-powered radio which would flash throughout the land news of crimes by "public enemies."

Hoover said the bureau was studying "methods of rapidly broadcasting important information pertaining to crimes of national interest and the apprehension of notorious criminal fugitives."

A recommendation for a radio broadcasting station at bureau headquarters, capable of reaching every police receiver in the country, is being considered.

Meanwhile a public that has "turned to support the officer" against tampering politics and vicious crime was given credit for bringing a three-year ebb in the tide of American crime.

Credit Divided.

Hoover said also that in the gradual paring down of the number of murders, robberies and auto thefts credit likewise should go to the work of "all law enforcement officers—city, State and Federal."

These ideas were expressed in response to inquiry as to what was responsible for the crime decline reported Monday by the Justice Department.

"We're working toward a new standard in law enforcement," Hoover said of the general campaign. "Too long the law enforcement officer has been the football of political issues. Whenever some demagogue or nitwit politician has sought to win votes, he has picked on the police or the law enforcement officers. The officers have been helpless, unable to fight back. Now the public has turned to support the officer."

Newspapers have led in making the public law enforcement conscious, instead of crime conscious, Hoover said, and radios and motion pictures have aided the trend.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

U. S. Navy Band Orchestra, Lieut. Charles Benter, conductor. First concert of the season, Sail Loft, Navy Yard. Program: Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini" (Berlioz), Serenade in G, "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" (Mozart), "Till Eulenspiegels lustige Streiche" (Richard Strauss), "Fantaisie Dialoguee" for organ and orchestra (Boellmann), Symphony No. 2, "Antar" (Rimski-Korsakov),.. "Sailors' Dance" from "The Red Poppy" (Gliere).

A large audience, including the members of the Orquesta Tipica Mexicana now visiting Washington, attended the opening concert of the season by the augmented orchestra of the United States Navy. With 98 men under his direction, Lieut. Charles Benter essayed in his interesting program some compositions, such as the Richard Strauss tone poem, which have been hitherto barred from the programs because of their instrumental demands.

It was exactly that tone poem which, except for the Mozart suite for strings, received the best performance of the evening. It would seem, from the evidence of one's ears, that rehearsals had been concentrated upon it, for the reading was highly spirited and its technical details were the most carefully dovetailed. In other numbers there was more looseness of structure and less coherence of the choirs.

Like Kipling's ship, the new orchestra is in the process of finding itself. It takes time for any organization of musicians to become homogeneous and supple, to respond with constant smoothness and pliability to the conductor's beat. Until that point is reached, one must be lenient with certain maladjustments.

The playing of Boellmann's "Fantaisie Dialoguee" was made possible by the installation of the electrical orgatron, at the console of which William Arbuckle presided. The work bears out its title by the interchange of themes between the solo instrument and the orchestra and is well built contrapuntally.

Rimski-Korsakov's "Antar" has no more right to claim the name of symphony than has his "Sharazad" suite; in fact, not so much, for the latter is by far the more integrated. "Antar" is programmatic and descriptive music without any development whatever, and follows an Arabian tale with the license of fantasy.

'Ace of Ad Men' Predicts Great Business Boom

Billion and Half Increase Depends on Advertising, Collins Tells Club.

Kenneth Collins, the red-haired New Yorker who is frequently called America's ace advertising man, last night predicted that, "if present trends continue, an increase of $1,500,000,000 in retail business throughout the country next year will be a conservaitve estimate."

Such an increase, he told the the Thanksgiving meeting of the Advertising Club in the Willard Hotel, would be only a 5 per cent rise. It would compare with a total estimated business in retail stores this year of $33,000,000,000.

But it would be the "marginal" business that would be added, he said. It's worth going after, he counselled the 200 men and women present, even if it requires the expenditure of "what may look like a prohibitive price for advertising to insure your getting your share."

"Ad" Funds Urged.

While a normal business won't spend more than 3, 4 or 5 per cent of its volume for advertising, still, he said, it's worth spending as much as 5 per cent and more of the hoped-for volume of that "marginal" amount in additional advertising to make sure of getting that margin—for the margin may go up, for a successful store, to as high as 20 per cent, instead of the 5 per cent norm.

Collins compared this margin to the Nation's foreign trade. American foreign trade, he said, is normally only 10 per cent of the total business done here, but, he continued:

"It is the difference between prosperity and depression."

To consumers he threw a statement that increased advertising costs did not necessarily mean increased prices. He said modern business had learned that an increased demand, instead of bringing the increased prices about which Adam Smith theorized, actually resulted in "learning to make the product more efficiently, more rapidly and more cheaply, and therefore in reducing the price."

Spurs Business Men.

He urged business men to go out for that marginal business immediately:

"Fifty to 75 per cent of any store's Christmas business is in that marginal business. Countless stores in America make their entire year's profit in the next 24 days. Nothing can happen to increase those stores' costs now except a slight increase in delivery costs. From 24 to 25 cents on the dollar would be profit, and the stores could still afford to spend 5 cents of that 25 for advertising to assure them that profit, and still be well off on January 1."

Previously, the club had heard Sylvan King, of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, advise:

"Urge the people to circulate their money and make this a perfect Christmas. Think of what it would mean if every one who had money would buy gifts for his friends and relatives. We would start going places."

At the same time, E. J. Adams, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission's special board of investigation, told the group that "it is the right thing and the profitable thing to adhere to the truth," warning against misleading advertising.

There were talks also by Maybelle Jennings and Gordon Hittenmark, radio announcers, and President Norman C. Kal presided.

Harvard College Expels Young Ryan

Ad Executive's Son Beat Janitor During Party.

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 26.—Bennett Y. Ryan, 22, Harvard junior and son of William Joseph Ryan, New York advertising executive, was expelled from Harvard College today for assaulting and beating a janitor of Dunster House during a cocktail party after the Harvard-Dartmouth football game a month ago.

Ryan's expulsion by the Harvard administration board was announced by Dean A. C. Hanford, of Harvard College. Ryan was convicted on an assault and battery charge a few days ago and will be sentenced December 2.

Murder Charged to Girl In Shooting of Husband

Denver, Nov. 26 (AP).—Auburn-haired Mary Elizabeth Smith, 17, who, officers said, confessed shooting her husband in a misguided move to protect the name of their infant son, was charged today with murder.

She was given permission to attend the funeral of the 18-year-old husband, Robert Dwight Smith. The girl told officers she had believed annulment proceedings brought by Smith would deprive their 8-months-old baby of his legal name.

Chaplin's "Modern Times"

Hollywood, Nov 26.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN is now scoring his flicker, "Modern Times." This means that the picture is finally completed and edited. "Modern Times" is the most important scoring task in Hollywood, for the Chaplin flicker is silent, and it is through the musical arrangements and sound effects that it will talk. Chaplin has written an original musical score and suggested the known music being used.

Chaplin sits in a camp chair on a large recording set at the United Artists' studio, supervising the scoring. His hair is gray. He has a stubble gray beard. He wears black patent leather shoes with white suede tops, and his right arm is carried in a sling. A blue silk muffler serves as the sling. Chaplin broke his right thumb in the door of his auto.

There is a screen hanging in midair in back of the orchestra. The part of "Modern Times" being scored will be shown on this screen. Chaplin is chewing gum in time with the orchestra. Only a few of Chaplin's personal friends among the magazine writers and several visitors from the Soviet cinema have seen sections of the picture. No newspaperman has seen a flash of it. I walk on the set, stand and watch. Soon Chaplin sees me. He grins a broad "Hello" and then says it. I approach him. "I'd like to watch you work. May I?" Chaplin always has been congenial to me. "Stay around," he answers, "but don't tell too much." I promise. And I believe I'll keep that promise, for I have yet to write a column in which I believe I have told enough.

• • • •

THE orchestra starts rehearsing the music for the factory sequence in which Chaplin revolts against being a slave of the machinery. He throws the place into confusion and does a wild dance. The music is as difficult as the scene. Every note must be timed exactly with the film, and the music is not loud and brazen as expected of factory sounds. The orchestra rehearses these few bars again . . . again . . . again. An hour later, they're still doing those few bars. The orchestra stops playing. The men leave their chairs. There's time out for five minutes, like a football team. It is strenuous work. The musicians work only three, four hours at the most, at a stretch. Then they have an hour for relaxation. Yesterday, they worked from 9 in the morning until 4 o'clock the next morning, and about half a reel was completely scored. It costs Chaplin on the average of $1,000 an hour to score this flicker.

• • • •

Now, after several hours of rehearsing, Al Newman and Chaplin agree they will try to record this scene. The signal is given. The picture is ready to be flashed on the screen. The man in the sound booth is ready to pick up the music and capture it. I am invited to sit in the sound booth with Paul Neal, for here I can see the picture and hear the music as it is recorded. He is the only man on the set who sees and hears the flicker as if it were being shown in a theater. Chaplin, with the baggy trousers, the big shoes and black hair, is on the screen. The Chaplin with neat clothes and gray hair sits looking at him.

• • • •

Hours later they are still rehearsing, recording. I have taken many "times out" with the musicians. My beard is now more prominent than Chaplin's. It is after the dinner hour when I leave the set. I have to leave to catch a preview. At the preview, a newly manufactured modern talkie is flashed on the screen. It is very strange to me. The people on the screen are talking. I have to get used to it.

The only talking Chaplin does in "Modern Times" is his singing in a most unusual manner in a night club. He gets out on the floor and starts singing in a—but I haven't any more space in the column. I told you I have yet to write a column in which I can tell enough.

Blast in New Orleans Cuts Off Water Supply

New Orleans, Nov. 26 (AP).—An explosion at the purification plant in the southwest section of New Orleans tonight cut off the entire city's water supply, police said. Reports said fire followed the explosion. The damage or cause of the blast was not determined.

Telephone operators were deluged with calls. Hospitals were concerned over the lack of water and restaurants, hotels, saloons and drug stores were inconvenienced.

Unpledged Delegation Favored by David Reed

Philadelphia, Nov. 26 (AP).—Former U. S. Senator David A. Reed said today he favors an uninstructed Pennsylvania delegation to the 1936 Republican national convention. He is not committed to anyone for the Presidency, he said, waving himself out of the "favorite son class."

"It is much too early to talk about individuals," he said. Reed is a member of the Republican national committee.

Olympic Ban Urged by Jahncke

Doubts Nazis' Pledges of Fair Play to Jews Have Been Kept.

the German pledges have been kept in the face of overwhelming and conclusive evidence to the contrary, has caused many persons to doubt your own good faith in the matter. I for one believe that you yourself really desired to keep these pledges although, of course, I can understand the circumstances that have rendered you powerless to do so.

"As you know, I am of German descent. I love the Germany that was and which, I pray, will some day be again. It is as much because of my affection for that Germany as because of my devotion to the spirit of the sport that I feel it my duty, as an American citizen and one of the three members of the International Olympic committee representing the United States, to stand for fundamental principle in this matter."

Earlier this month Jahncke received a letter from Dr. Lewald, who had been informed by Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, that he (Brundage) anticipated difficulty in raising a $300,000 fund to send American athletes abroad next summer.

Jahncke Refuses Aid.

"It would be very surprising were it otherwise," said Jahncke in his letter to Dr. Lewald. "I cannot assist in the efforts to raise this very large sum of money."

Jahncke said his letter to Count Baillet-Latour was inspired by one he received from the international leader, who asked Jahncke to do all in his power to bring about American participation in the games.

"I shall do all that I can to persuade my fellow Americans that they ought not take part in the games if they are held in Nazi Germany," Jahncke wrote.

"I shall urge upon my countrymen that they should not participate because it is my opinion that upon the domination of the Nazi government the German sports authorities have violated and are continuing to violate every requirement of fair play in the conduct of sports in Germany and in the selection of the German team, and are exploiting the games for the political and financial profit of the Nazi regime. Neither Americans nor the representatives of other countries can take part in the games in Nazi Germany without at least acquiescing in the contempt of the Nazis for fair play and their sordid exploitation of the games.

Holds Pledges Flaunted.

"Our committee was true to its trust in June, 1933, when it demanded and received from the Nazi sports authorities, as the condition of permitting Germany to retain the games, guarantees that the Nazis would observe the Olympic code and would not discriminate against German athletes on religious grounds. In spite of all your alleged proofs, the nature of which you do not disclose, the plain and undeniable fact is that the Nazis have consistently and persistently violated their pledges.

"If our committee were still true to its trust, it would long since have taken the games away from Germany. You remind me of my duty as a member of the international Olympic committee. Therefore, I feel sure that you will not consider me presumptuous in reminding you of your duty as president of the committee. It is plainly your duty to hold Nazi sports authorities accountable for the violation of their pledges. I simply cannot understand why, instead of doing that, you are engaged in formulating and in spreading 'arguments' to show those of us who still believe in the Olympic idea should

Dakotans in Football Roundup Here

Famed alumni who made their marks in football at the University of North Dakota greet Capt. Fritz Falgren, who will lead the Nodaks against George Washington tomorrow. Left to right, Congressman William Lemke, who captained North Dakota in 1901-1902; Falgren, Senator Lynn J. Frazier, Dakota's captain in 1899-1900, and J. F. T. O'Connor, United States Comptroller of Currency, who managed the Dakoto team in his college days.

Six Wolfpack Stars Ready For Cards

Anderson Has Real Aces on N. C. State Team Coming Here.

It takes eleven men to make a football team, but only one to ruin the afternoon for another squad, and North Carolina State has five or six individuals of this caliber who are ready for their final fling of the season tomorrow against Catholic University at Griffith Stadium.

Capt. Barnes Worth, a guard, and Steve Sabol, acclaimed the greatest center ever enrolled at State, and Mac Cara, end, are the Wolfpack's three outstanding linemen and all are standouts at their respective positions. Worth has been an All-Southern selection for three years, while Sabol was just recently given this recognition. Cara, while not on the all-star team, wasn't entirely overlooked, receiving honorable mention.

In the backfield, and these are the men who probably will give Catholic its most anxious moments, "Hunk" Anderson has Howard Bardes, the greatest kicker in the Southern Conference; Cowboy Robinson and Eddie Berlinski, an outstanding sophomore ball carrier. Against Duke last Saturday Bardes averaged 48 yards from the line of scrimmage, outkicking Parker, Duke ace, by a comfortable margin. Robinson and Berlinski have been the big guns of State's attack all season.

None Too Bright.

Dutch Bergman, Cardinal coach, yesterday admitted that the outlook tomorrow is none too bright for his men. Bergman thinks State has the best balance of any team he has seen in action this season. He is satisfied that it is a better team than Duke and feels that the Blue Devils were extremely lucky to win last week.

'Enough of This,' Says 'Wildcat,' Quitting Ring

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 26.—After clowning through the greater portion of the bout, Wildcat Monte, Fort Worth, Tex., fighter, suddenly cried: "I've had enough of this," lifted aloft the right hand of Joey Spiegal, Pittsburgh, Pa., welterweight, and jumped from the ring early in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round bout tonight.

Both men scaled 145. Speigal, a southpaw, dropped Monte for the count of nine three times, but the Texan was in good shape when he decided to quit.

Leemans, G. W.'s Greatest Back, in Last Tilt Tomorrow.

A long drill on offense yesterday left George Washington's grid machine tightly wound and ready to run against North Dakota tomorrow in their holiday battle at Central High School Stadium.

More tightly wound than any other member of the squad, perhaps, was Tuffy Leemans, who is preparing for his farewell appearance in a collegiate game on District soil. Always dependable for a worthwhile, often brilliant, performance, it is not hard to predict that Leemans will be at his best tomorrow.

Glancing back over Leemans' record, it is not difficult to see how invaluable the bounding Belgian has been to the Colonial offense. Without him in there the team would have been in a sorry fix for an offense.

Playing in 26 games over a three-year span, Tuffy carried the ball 470 times for gains totaling 2,305 yards, an average gain of 4.9 yards. He has thrown forward passes good for gains of 939 yards, and this season has helped his team to 102 yards of enemy territory on 37 passes.

During the last two years he returned 23 kick-offs for 537 yards, an average of 23 yards, and ran back 76 punts, for a total of 873 yards, another average of 11.5 yards a run. Leemans' own punting has been good enough to average over 40 yards a kick from the point of the punt during the same two years. That doesn't read like one man's record. It sounds more like a team average.

So when the fans say good-by to the stout-hearted, spring-legged halfback tomorrow, they also will be getting their last glimpse of the best back in George Washington football history, and possibly the best offense the team will have for some time.

Rockne, Jr., Stars With Miami Team

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Nov. 26.—"A fleet quarterback, Knute Rockne was the shining star this afternoon as his team smashed its way to victory * * *"

So may the headlines read three or four years hence, in the belief of Reed Williams, who coaches the youthful Miami Military Academy team on which Knute, jr., plays.

True son of his late, famed father, Williams says, is the 17-year-old tow-headed youngster who bore the brunt of the ball carrying in his team's 26-0 victory over Hollywood High here last Saturday.

Three times Rockne, slipping off tackle or around end, fled ghost-like more than 60 yards down the field to score.

Md. Practice Is Eased for Syracuse

Coaches Fear Old Liners Will Go Stale for Tilt in Baltimore.

ALTHOUGH Maryland faces one of its toughest assignments of the season tomorrow at Baltimore, where it tackles Syracuse, one of the East's ranking elevens, Terp coaches virtually have suspended football practice.

The squad emerged from its gruelling fray with Georgetown last Saturday in good physical trim, but Messrs. Faber and Dobson decided that too much work would make the boys go stale and so they decreed a temporary vacation from the gridiron. Not that Maryland has forsaken practice entirely, for it still reports daily, although there has been little time to prepare for the battle, but the work has consisted of little more than limbering-up exercises.

Two Weeks' Rest.

Syracuse has the advantage of a two-weeks rest since its last game, which it dropped to Colgate, and is reported at tops. The big Orange eleven is aiming to equal the best record of any Syracuse team, seven victories and one defeat. It must whip Maryland tomorrow to accomplish this feat.

Maryland's hopes of winning will be vested almost wholly in the muscular legs of Bill Guckeyson, its star halfback, who will be called upon to do most of the ball-carrying and all of the punting. If he turns in an exhibition similar to that of "Untz" Brewer, who punted and dropkicked the Terps to a 10-7 upset victory over Syracuse in '20, Maryland is virtually assured of winning.

Action Taken After Long Parley

Every Effort to Be Made to Sell Club Before Majors' Meeting.

Murphy, Shoe Mogul, Is Reported Trying to Form Syndicate.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The franchise of the Boston Braves was taken over tonight by the National League in the first step toward solving the financial affairs of that club. After a five-hour session in the office of Ford Frick, National League president, the club owners voted to take over the club and operate it until a satisfactory purchaser is found.

The club will continue in Boston, but every effort will be made to sell it before the major league meeting in Chicago December 10. It is understood that Francis P. Murphy, wealthy shoe manufacturer of Nashua, N. H., and a minority stockholder in the Braves, will organize a syndicate to bid for the franchise.

Efforts Unsuccessful.

Since August 1, when Judge Emil Fuchs, resigned as president of the Braves, Charles Francis Adams, vice president and majority stockholder, has been trying to reorganize the club, but his efforts were unsuccessful.

Murphy attended the meeting, but left while it was still in progress, apparently satisfied that all attempts to get the club affairs straightened out had failed. Adams and V. C. Bruce Whitmore, treasurer of the club, also represented the Boston Club.

Before issuing the following official statement, President Frick explained that "this is a friendly forfeiture:"

"At a meeting of the National League today, by a vote of the presidents of the individual clubs unanimously carried, Boston not voting, the National League repossessed the franchise and players' contracts of the Boston National League Baseball Co. under the authority provided by section 9 of the National League constitution.

As a result of today's action the Braves' franchise and players are legally the property of the National League. The league has the authority to sell the club to the highest bidder, but Frick said such a

Rahway, N. J., Nov. 26 (AP).—Found: A young man who claims he was the individual who tried to die for dear old Dartmouth at Princeton Saturday.

Michael Mesco, a counterman in a Rahway lunch wagon, modestly tells his customers he was the spectator who joined the Dartmouth line late in the final quarter in the losing game with the Tiger eleven. He points out Dartmouth stopped the Princeton touchdown charge on the play in which he participated.

Mesco said he made a wager on Dartmouth, and in his excitement rushed out to help his cause. After one play, he was rushed out of the stadium.

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

BEHIND the collapse of the Boston Braves and the surrender of their National League franchise is the story of intra-city competition that proved killing. The Braves' chief sin was their misfortune, in encountering as the owner of the Boston American League club, Tom Yawkey and his millions. The entrance of Yawkey and his unbounded bankroll into the Boston baseball situation foreshadowed the decline of the Braves, who, as one of the poorer clubs in the big leagues, were already struggling to make the income meet the pay roll.

POVICH.

In every city where there are two big league ball clubs, the battle for patronage waxes fierce, but depends directly on each club's standing in the pennant race. With the Braves a perennial second-division outfit, Yawkey was able to project his Red Sox full into the high esteem of Boston fans and the Braves' attendance consequently suffered. Judge Emil Fuchs and his limited bankroll could not stand the gaff of declining receipts; C. F. Adams, the majority stockholder, did not choose to shoulder the entire burden, and the Boston franchise is back in the lap of the National League.

Yawkey lost little time in shoving the Braves into the background in Boston. In his first season as owner of the club, he purchased Catcher Rick Ferrell from the Browns for $25,000. The following season he bought Pitchers Lefty Grove and Rube Walberg and Second Baseman Max Bishop from Connie Mack at an estimated cost of $175,000, and paid Cleveland $20,000 for Wes Ferrell. During the winter of 1934 he hit the high spot of his purchasing campaign when he paid Clark Griffith a quarter-million dollars for the contract of Joe Cronin.

With such stars grafted onto his team, Yawkey was not long in lifting the Red Sox into favoritism among Boston fans. Despite his failure to win a pennant, Yawkey saw his team make serious championship gestures at various stages last season. Boston fans, starved for an excuse to cheer a home-town club, virtually deserted the Braves in support of the Red Sox. When Babe Ruth proved a flop as a counter-attraction for the Braves, the Red Sox were secure in the saddle of Boston patronage.

LUCKY it is for the Phillies in Philadelphia that the Athletics have encountered financial reverses. Sparse attendance has drained the A's treasury of the sums received from the sale of such stars as Al Simmons, Jimmy Dykes, Mule Haas and Grove, Walberg, Bishop and Mickey Cochrane. With Mack's teams in the ruck for the past two years and the wherewithal to buy new talent lacking, the Phillies have been able to muscle in on a fair share of the Philadelphia patronage which formerly was almost exclusive with the American League club.

At St. Louis, the Browns have been able to survive the competition from the dashing Cardinals for the past two years only because of the flaming personal magnetism and shrewdness of Rogers Hornsby. Until Hornsby came to the club, the Browns were baseball's patronage orphans. Fewer than 100 people attended countless games in the Browns' park. Hornsby, with his knack of procuring talent by trade and putting a fighting, if ill-rounded team, on the field has enabled the Browns to survive. For two years, under his management, the Browns have showed a profit as a result of his sale of players at little cost to the strength of his club, and despite still sparse attendance.

In the other two big league cities, which support two ball clubs each—Chicago and New York—the situation is vastly different. In New York, both the Yankees and Giants are backed by copious bankrolls, and in Chicago where the White Sox are forced to meet the competition of Wrigley's Cubs, the Comiskey family has the potatoes that enables the Sox to go into the market for talent. Thus the situation narrows to a frenzied battle to place the best ball team on the field.

In New York, especially, the team that fails to figure seriously in the pennant race takes an awful rap in the gate receipts. That New York demands a winner is proverbial in sports. The faithful who attend the games of the Giants irregardless, as we say in our set, or those who follow the Yankees religiously, are comparatively few compared to the great body of fans who gravitate to the winning team. In Chicago, the White Sox demonstrated during the past season when they enjoyed the league lead for a period of weeks, that Chicago customers vowed no particular allegiance to the Cubs.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 26.—The effigy of an Army football player in gridiron togs, garroted by Navy knots and suspended from the rotunda of Bancroft Hall at the Naval Academy, was yanked down and thrown into a blazing bonfire tonight on Farragut Field as 2,000 midshipmen staged their annual pep rally prior to the thirty-sixth annual Army-Navy service clash on Franklin Field, in Philadelphia, Saturday.

The blue-clad midshipmen regiment, pouring from mess formation in Bancroft Hall, where the Academy band played while they sang and cheered, pulled down the "cadet" and dragged him to Farragut Field for ceremonies.

There Louis B. Robertshaw, Navy captain and center, tossed the West Pointer into a blazing bonfire as the Middies roared approval. With red signal lights throwing garnish rays on the stone-gray buildings, the Tars snake-danced around the pyre,

First Army-Navy Game in '90 Drew a Few Fans—All Free

"It was a cold winter day——" Brig. Gen. John Heavey (retired), pictured above, recalled as he discussed the first Army-Navy game 45 years ago, in which he played for West Point. Army lost, 24-0.

IT was on a blustery day, with the wind blowing sleet across the plains of West Point, that several hundred hardy enthusiasts gathered 45 years ago to see the Cadets play the Midshipmen in a new-fangled game called football.

That engagement, which the Sailors won, 24 to 0, was the humble beginning of the service rivalry that has become fall's outstanding sports spectacle.

On Saturday 80,000 fans will jam the cement horseshoe of Franklin Field, Philadelphia, to thrill to the maneuvers of another Army-Navy battle. They'll pay around $250,000 for the privilege.

According to the Associated Press, the small crowd at that first game got in free—the players were proud to have spectators.

There was little mention of the game in the newspapers of that day. But next Saturday some 200 sports reporters will write about 250,000 words about the soldiers and the sailors.

To pay the Midshipmen's expenses to West Point 45 years ago the Cadets "chipped" in 52 cents each.

Nautical orders were the signals the Sailors used. Navy's quarterback, the late Capt. Moulton Johnson, barked, "Rise, tacks and sheets, let go and overhaul the weather lifts" and the Sailors tore into their flying wedge.

Veteran Robertson Rides 4 Firsts and a Second at Bowie

Wins Feature To Polish Off Afternoon

By Walter Haight,

A Staff Correspondent.

BOWIE RACE TRACK, Nov. 26. Alfred Robertson, one of the Nation's leading jockeys for a decade, had a saddle field day at this turf plant this afternoon before a crowd of some 8,000. "Robbie," as he is called by his fellow jockeys and horsemen, rode four winners and a second in six trips to the post and became the favorite to win the $500 gold watch offered by the track for the leading rider at the meeting.

Robertson, who is finishing out six years of contract riding for the C. V. Whitney Stable before entering the hire of the extensive Milky Way Stable in 1936, scored his principal victory of the day in the feature race. The contest was the Howard W. Jackson Trophy event, named in honor of the Mayor of Baltimore, and the winner was Rough Diamond, a gelded son of Mad Hatter, which triumphed with a closing punch.

Day's Masterpiece.

Although Robertson had to work hard on each of his winning mounts, his exhibition on Rough Diamond was his day's masterpiece. He brought the C. V. Whitney representative home a length in front of Samuel S. Sand's Ballystratford and a length and a half ahead of B. M. Byers' Thorson after a trip over the mile and 70 yards course.

Rough Diamond lacked "early kick," as the horsemen call a slow starter, and was a trailer in the field of six as the group went along the back-stretch, Weston and Ballystratford were waging a merry battle for the pace-setting honor. However, Robertson seemed to know his mount, for he made no effort to improve his position at this time, being content to hug the rail and save ground.

Nearing the stretch, Robertson called upon Rough Diamond for speed. While the rest of the field swung a little wide, Robertson sent his mount through a gap along the rail and, presto, Rough Diamond suddenly changed from the last horse to the first horse. From there to the wire, Robertson gave his charge no chance to lag.

He rode for all he was worth and Rough Diamond ran for all he was worth. Ballystratford hung on willingly, but could not match the Whiteyite. Thorson closed some ground, but only enough to save third money.

Rough Diamond paid a $10.30 mutuel.

Robertson's other winners were Kendal Green, $7.60; Ilchester, $11.40, and Darkling, $5.60.

The daily double pool of $12,182 was the largest on a week-day during the meeting and Kendal Green and Maid of Arches teamed to bring a $52.90 mutuel.

Head Victory.

Kendall Green, with Jockey Alfred Robertson in the saddle, won by a head over Must Be in the first race after the two had staged a thrilling battle all the way. Count Me was third in the field of a dozen maiden juveniles. The victory added another notch for Trainer Max Hirsch. The winner, coupled with Exaggeration in the betting, paid a $7.60 mutuel.

M. J. Brennan, from the popular B. B. Stable, won impressively in the second race, opening up a day-light lead on Our Hobby and Fred Almy in the stretch run. Pancoast, the early pace setter, folded in the straightaway and Don Romiro, the favorite, showed only brief early speed before dropping out of the important part of the running. The winner paid $8.20.

Maid of Arches, a first-time starter from Virginia and the property of Mrs. M. du P. Somerville, took a thrilling nose decision from Sunned in the third race. Both horses were all out in the drive to the wire. Sainted was third. The daughter of Warden of the Marches paid $8.20 in the role of a paddock tip. The winner is trained by Preston Burch, of Washington.

Knight Warrior, a recent graduate from the maiden ranks, scored a smashing victory in the fourth race, the Bay Shore purse. Ridden by Bobby Merritt, the son of Crusader took command swinging for the stretch and gave his backers no anxious moments thereafter. Indomitable, of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' entry, was second and Admiral Cary T. Grayson's Happy Dear was third. Knight Warrior paid $12.90.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KENDAL GREEN (entry), $7.60, $4.10, $2.60; MUST BE, $4.20, $2.50; COUNT ME, $2.60.

KENDAL GREEN moved into a short lead soon after the start, met repeated bids from MUST BE all during the running, and barely lasted long enough under a tenacious drive. MUST BE offered stiff contention from the start, saved ground and continued strongly while finishing in tight quarters next the inside rail. COUNT ME followed close up on the inside in the early running, came to the outside when straightened into the home stretch and was wearing the first two down at every stride at the end. WAYALOFT went in the first flight and had no mishaps. PAUL JUNIOR finished full of run after being slow to get going. LETTER BOX finished with belated speed. TERRY ON lost ground all the way. CARELESS KNIGHT was held safe. FEUETTE had early speed.

M. J. BRENNAN, away nicely and kept in near pursuit of the leaders while on the outside, took command with a rush midway of the bend, was placed to punishment after reaching the home stretch, and held OUR HOBBY safe. Latter, interfered with soon after the start, was sent to the outside when moving into contention and came courageously under a strong drive. FRED ALMY, a keen factor from the start, held on well when the real test came. POSTPONEMENT saved ground entering the home stretch and finished willingly. PANCOAST was rushed hard in the first half mile, and he tired when the final drive came. INSCRIPTION went well. BILLIE WISE could not threaten seriously. STAR QUEEN and YANKEE WATERS were in tight quarters after the break.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAID OF ARCHES (field), $8.20, $5.40, $4.00; SUNNED, $3.60, $3.10; SAINTED, $4.50.

MAID OF ARCHES, racing in the first flight and kept on the outside of the leaders, finished determinedly after being straightened into the home stretch and was up in the concluding strides. SUNNED displaced REE when leaving the back stretch, responded to hard pressure and fought it out stoutly in the closing stages. SAINTED worked his way up on the outside and was going gamely at the close. AGA RAY was shuffled back when leaving the back stretch, then came again after securing racing room on the inside. SAM WORTHY lacked racing room until reaching the home stretch, then finished gamely. MISS PREMIER was caught in tight quarters and fell back early. WEE PRINCESS was unable to menace seriously. REE stopped after having speed for a half mile. The others were never factors.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNIGHT WARRIOR, $12.90, $6.70, $4.90; INDOMITABLE (entry), $3.70, $3.00; HAPPY DEAR, $4.40.

KNIGHT WARRIOR, prominent in the early running, challenged strongly when leaving the back stretch, wore INDOMITABLE down midway of the home stretch and drew out nicely approaching the finish. INDOMITABLE broke fast to set the early pace, shook off CAPTAIN JINKS and HAPPY DEAR, but could not stay with the winner when collared. HAPPY DEAR went up on the inside to make a determined bid entering the final turn but weakened in the closing test. SWAMP ANGEL closed willingly after getting into full stride. BOBS BOYS could not improve his position. CAPTAIN JINKS was done early. THIRTEEN STARS showed no speed at any stage.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. In Class C. Handicap. Start fair from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:45½. Winner, C. V. Whitney's b. g. (3), by Mad Hatter—Frumpety. Trained by T. J. Healy. Value to winner, $880; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 1-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH DIAMOND, $10.30, $5.60, $3.90; BALLY STRATFORD, $7.70, $5.20; THORSON, $7.80.

ROUGH DIAMOND, going in his best form, saved a lot of ground while being outrun, came through on the inside when reaching the home stretch, finished fast and was going away under pressure after displacing BALLY STRATFORD. Latter, full of run while following WESTON, assumed command when ready but failed to rally approaching the finish. THORSON swung to the outside in the late stages and came with a bold rush nearing the end. FORTIFICATION went well placed, but weakened after looming up stoutly midway of the final turn. WESTON was used up setting the pace under his heavy weight. SABLE MUFF was no factor after breaking awkwardly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:15½. Winner, J. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ILCHESTER, $11.40, $6.80, $4.70; BLACK FALCON, $4.50, $2.70; WISE ADVOCATE, $2.50.

ILCHESTER, rated within striking distance of the leaders, moved up swiftly when put to a drive, wore BLACK FALCON down when straightened into the home stretch, then came out slowly at the close. BLACK FALCON disposed of CORNER BOY when reaching the back stretch, saved ground after moving to the front, but could not resist the winner. WISE ADVOCATE worked his way up slowly, but could not threaten the leaders. IDLE FLIRT went into a good position at the final turn, but was not good enough. REPEAL raced in spots. COMING BACK was held safe. CORNER BOY tired after six furlongs. JAMES BOY was done after six furlongs. The others were held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:43½. Winner, R. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARKLING, $5.40, $3.80, $3.30; BELLE FILLE (field), $10.60, $11.60; WAR SAINT (field), $2.60.

DARKLING, going in her best form, improved her position readily when shaken up in the last half mile, swung to the outside of the leaders and drew out after displacing BELIEVER. BELLE FILLE offered stout contention while chasing WAR SAINT, saved ground and held on well for the closing test. WAR SAINT was steadied in front, met repeated efforts from BELLE FILLE, but weakened in the closing furlong. SOUND MONEY was gaining steadily during the closing stages. FAIR ROCHESTER closed with a rush. BELIEVER had too much taken out of him to reach contention and he stopped. HEEDLESS GAL went well placed but failed to rally when put to a drive.

Naming of Sectional All-Star Teams Eases All-American Task

Gallico

Finally Regains Composure After Hectic Week-End

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The past week-end has had a curious, hazy, sort of dream-like effect upon me. I must settle it in my own mind before I can carry on with the present or the future. It was so fast and breathless while it went on that it is not as clear as I would have it and I am not ordered in my own mind. Topsy is obviously a bum. And there seems also to have been the episode of the double fight in Boston, the episode of the boxing commissioner who also was a football official, and the quite British attitude toward the press in the Field House at Princeton (throw-the-bounders out) and the blizzard vs. a pint of Old Grandad, and Princeton vs. Dartmouth on a slippery, snow-covered field, and the man who ran out onto the field to play on the Dartmouth side when there was but 5 yards to to go to cross Dartmouth's line.

It is bad, mentally and physically, to whirl through such a speedy sequence of events as I did beginning last Friday afternoon without pausing to harvest at least an idea or two. Somewhere along the line something must have taken place that must have contributed to the sum and substance of human relation. Let us, then, begin at the beginning and proceed slowly. Topsy, my Ethiopian control, who tipped me on the football game last week, is quite obviously a fraud, a charlatan and a faker and the best that may be said for her is that she is a lousy prophet and I am done with her.

Such games as I managed to tab correctly, the shameful total of 6 right out of 15, were all proper form games. Not one of the blind stabs, or prophetic visions of Topsy were worth the cost of the white paper they were printed on, not one of them was even close.

AND SO hereafter I am done with these witless ghosts who presume upon their nothingness to utter dicta upon subjects where a common living intelligence must reach the better conclusion. Hereafter I will make my own mistakes. I have learned to bear and live with myself, but I do not care to consider Topsy swishing about the Cosmos, laughing at me.

The fine and bawdy comedy played in Boston ends sourly. The colored man who fought and succumbed to Jack Sharkey twice on one night, by name Unknown Winston, has been suspended for a year and his purse confiscated, a sentence more cruel than jail because jails at least are heated, and there is food three times a day and a cot. It was pure comedy, you know, from beginning to end, and it should have passed on laughter. Life, for the few minutes of that fight, was lustier and more vital, stranger and more amusing than one could mirror on a stage, because the audience took part and played it to the hilt.

You know that you would feel disappointed and outraged if the day after you had seen an excellent and moving comedy in the theater, in which the villain had tried to make free with the lovely and innocent young heroine (always one of the most touching and moving of subjects) and had received his just deserts, you opened your paper and read that the actor who so fiercely portrayed this part so vital to the illusion of the evening had been collared by the police upon walking off the stage, locked up, charged and convicted of attempted seduction of the heroine of the play.

You would feel that the poor actor had done no more than read his lines and follow stage direction and that at heart he was an orderly and respectable citizen honorably engaged in the struggle for existence. If he is to be jailed for misdemeanors in buskin, why not lock up author and director, too, and let them all stew in the same cell? But Winston, no more than an actor, is punished for the part he played, and Fat John Buckley, intriguer for Sharkey, is free to prepare further scripts. I say here is no justice, and shame on those who set their seal to it. They lack laughter.

Fine Players All Over Nation Make Problem Difficult One.

By Alan Gould

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—All that remains to be done now, before sending the 1935 All-America football team romping into pictorial action, is to find the best eleven players in a list of some 75 on this week's final roll call.

There's no known method of selection calculated to satisfy all concerned or to get an absolutely accurate comparison of all-star rivals playing on widely separated gridirons. So much good football is played in every section of the country that it is fairer and more completely representative to consider the situation in terms of the All-America "squad," three deep in each position. But the system calls for a starting team and it's too late now to dodge the responsibilities handed on to the country's harassed all-star pickers by the late Walter Camp.

Clarify Situation.

Sectional all-star teams already are helping to clarify the situation. The Big Ten selections, including five Minnesotans on the first team for the second straight year, have narrowed down the field of All-America contenders in one of the main sources of pigskin production. Developments of the past week have helped crystallize the opinions in other combat areas, but there is still room for considerable debate.

The Southwest, for instance, remains a hotbed of argument over the respective merits of several of the most talented backfield men in the country. Where Texas observers were almost unanimous earlier in singing the praises of Bobby Wilson, Southern Methodist's great little broken-field runner, they have now organized a cheering section for Sam Adrian Baugh, field general of the Texas Christians and the Southwest's No. 1 passer, if not the best anywhere. "Slinging Sam" not only has compiled an amazing record at tossing the pigskin for touchdowns this season but he does a good share of blocking, running and tackling, most of the kicking and all hte signal calling for the Frogs.

Wallace Mentioned.

Rice's Bill Wallace, a 1934 All-America halfback, turned in one of his best performances of the year against T. C. U. His efforts failed to keep the Owls from taking a shellacking but Wallace was the outstanding ground-gainer besides doing a fine job of blocking and passing. His running mate, John McCauley, suffered a head injury that kept him out of the last half but was also outstanding up to that stage of one of the most rugged engagements of the year.

The Baugh-Wilson argument has its climax Saturday when Capt. Darrell Lester, All-American center, leads Texas Christian into action against Southern Methodist on home grounds.

Stanford's Bobby Grayson, another hold-over All-America ace, and Chicago's great Jay Berwanger, both turned in marvelous performances in their climax games last Saturday. Both have measured up to every test. Berwanger, the only unanimous choice for the All-Big Ten team, personally tallied the 7 points that enabled Chicago to whip Illinois. Grayson, who played a fine defensive game and called signals, besides leading the

Virginia Holds Final Drill At Home

Special Dispatch to The Post.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Nov. 26. Virginia's football squad held its last home workout of the season this afternoon on Lambeth Field.

At 8 a. m. tomorrow the squad of players will leave for Chapel Hill, where they will have a final practice in the Keenan Stadium prior to facing North Carolina's Tarheels at 2 o'clock Thanksgiving afternoon.

This fortieth gridiron meeting of Cavaliers and Tarheels seems destined to be a victory for the Carolinians. Word comes from Chapel Hill that Coach Carl Snaveley has rallied his charges since their defeat by Duke, and that they'll face the Virginians determined to show the home folks what they really know about football.

Turner Postpones Wrestling Bout

Due to incompletion of his arena at Fourteenth and W streets northwest, Promoter Joe Turner announced last night that tomorrow's scheduled wrestling matches had been postponed until December 12. It also was announced that the arena would definitely open next Monday night when Phil Furr and Sid Silas are slated to headline a boxing show.

By way of adding a special punch to the glove waving entertainment Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has signed Jimmy Ferrare, 210-pound Baltimorean, to go six rounds or less with Washington's own Kirk Burk. In the remaining six-round prelims Eddie Burl opposses Joe Green and Billy Landers argues it out with Chester Ruby.

New London, Conn., Nov. 26 (AP).—Mark Whalen, former Central High School student, of Washington, D. C., was elected captain of the 1936 Coast Guard Academy football team here today. Whalen played end on the varsity eleven. John Naab, of Des Moines, Iowa, was named manager.

By John R. Vosburgh.

AMERICAN food is pretty tame stuff to Mexico City's all-high football players, who are here to play Central High Friday. In fact, they claim American food is nothing short of "insipido." That's no insult—merely their way of saying American food has no taste.

To put a little taste in it they've given special orders to the Harrington Hotel chef, whose career is more or less on trial for the rest of the time the boys eat there. His orders are to make the food hot by various means of seasoning, such as peppers, sauces and peppery relishes. He claims he has already set a new free-style record for ladling hot sauce in America.

The item required in particular by the torrid taste of the young men from Mexico is "salsa sauce." It seems food is just no food at all without salsa sauce, which is a combination of green tomatoes, green peppers, red peppers and several other things mixed in and crushed together.

Hot stuff is what the Mexicans want and plenty of it.

The Mexicans' diet on their football trip is almost strictly vegetable fare. This came as a sad blow to the Mexicans, to whom steaks, chops and chicken, warmly seasoned, are an almost indispensable part of their repasts. Coach Martin allows the boys a few slices of meat or a small chop at the evening meal. The other two meals consist of vegetables, cereal and milk. Each player is supposed to drink a quart and a half of milk a day.

"They'd drink more than that," says the coach, "if I'd let 'em. I figure these vegetables and milk are the best thing to keep 'em in good condition. The trouble with most Mexican athletes anyway is that they eat too darn much. That's why they get sluggish and lazy like. I want my boys to be fast and this diet has gotten 'em that way."

The team keeps training by the honor system. No smoking or drinking of alcoholic beverages or of coffee is allowed. The squad is divided into two groups of five players each and two groups of six players each. A "captain" with some knowledge of English is at the head of each group. Each captain and each group reports to the coach in the evening.

The players think the punishment for violation is severe. Any offender will be denied a place in the starting line-up against Central.

Landon 100-Pounders Trim St. Alban's, 7-0

Avenging an early-season defeat, the Landon Prep 100-pounders came back yesterday at Landon Stadium to defeat St. Alban's, 7-0, in the final game of the season for both elevens. Randy Perkins and Rickey Marsh starred for Landon, while Alexander and Law were best for the losers.

Ward's 438 Aids Motor Team to Nip Woodridge

Rolling the second highest set—438—that the Mount Rainier alleys have seen this season, Ray Ward last night helped the Edwards Motor Co. not only to defeat Woodridge, 2 to 1, but to take first place in the Mount Rainier Bowling League.

In the Washington Ladies' League on the Recreation alleys, the Nomads took all three games from the Veebees; the Ellgees won 2 out of 3 from the Colonials; the Beeques won two from the Columbians, and the Shamrocks spiked the Cardinals for three games. Ruth Rothgeb had high single with 134. High individual set was rolled by Evelyn Ream, with a 343.

Women in Tie.

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Hilda Stowell, of Chicago, threw the women's national amateur pocket billiard championship tournament into a three-way tie by defeating Mrs. Irene Hummel, of New York, 50 to 33, in 47 innings.

Yoder Annexes Rock Creek Medal

LEVI YODER, 24-year-old Indian Spring Country Club golf star, shot a 74 yesterday to win the play-off for the medal prize in the Rock Creek turkey tournament. Yoder put together a brace of 37s for his winning score.

Jack Crook, former Cincinnati professional, was second with a 37-39—76, and J. L. Ansted, after setting the pace with a 36 on the outgoing side, folded up on the back nine to finish with 81.

T. J. Gibraski, who won a turkey by virtue of being a finalist, and Nick Altrock, baseball coach-comedian, a former champion, waived their chances.

Yoder was 6 over par for the 18 holes, after shooting the first six holes in even par, and the first six holes of the B course in 1 under par. His card:

Out .....4 4 3 4 3 3 5 6 5—37
In .....4 3 3 3 4 5 6 4 5—37—74

Mrs. Wilda Martin, one of the better-known golfers at Kenwood Golf and Country Club, yesterday was declared winner of the ringer tournament. Mrs. Martin scored a 31-29—60 to top Mrs. Leo Walper by several strokes and win the Fuller Trophy, donated by Fred Fuller, Kenwood manager. Mrs. Martin was runner-up to Mrs. Walper in the club championship.

Johnny Mears, former assistant professional at Congressional Country Club, has been in town for the past few days, tuning up for the annual coast-to-coast golfing crusade. Mears, who is just 20, is pro at a New Hampshire course. Yesterday the red-haired boy limbered up at Kenwood and scored in the low 70s. He will leave today for Miami.

Roland Mackenzie may leave for Florida earlier than he had anticipated, he said yesterday. The Congressional pro had planned to leave Monday for Miami, but now it appears that he will shove off Friday or Saturday.

The first big money tournament of the season is the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore Open which opens December 14. Already some 12 well-known pros, including Billy Burke, former open champion, and Orville White, of Wisconsin, winner of the Pinehurst Midsouth event, have checked in at the Miami Country Club to prepare for the first of 20 big tournaments.

Quite a delegation of Washington golfers will leave this evening for Virginia Beach, Va., for a Thanksgiving links program arranged by Al Houghton, former Kenwood pro, now golf director of the Cavalier Hotel. The players will remain at Virginia Beach through Monday. Tournaments and other events have been arranged by Houghton.

Eddie Bean, former Beaver Dam Country Club golf champion, was declared winner of the turkey tournament at his club yesterday. He scored an 81. D. E. Mattison, with 83, 8—75; J. M. Palmer, 82, 6—77, and W. T. Henderson, 87, 10—77, were the first flight low net winners.

J. T. Strong, 89, 12—77; H. R. Devilbiss, 92, 14—78; C. E. Purdy, 92, 12—80, and W. C. Hall, 93, 13—80, were the second flight winners, while those who triumphed in the third flight were P. T. Reese, 88, 19—69; M. C. Stern, 96, 21—75; N. E. Reges, 100, 22—78.

S. C. Carroll, 104, 27—77, and D. W. Konopa, 104, 24—80, won in the fourth flight.

Cliff Spencer, professional, announced yesterday that the President's Cup tournament would be played tomorrow and the Marmiom Cup event Sunday.

Tangora's Play Against Irish Greatest Line Feat in Big Ten

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Back tracking the Big Ten football season over the highway of superlatives:

Biggest Upset: When Doc Spears and his weary Wisconsin team trimmed Purdue, 8 to 0, for their first and only victory of the season.

Most Surprised Team: Ohio State's Buckeyes when Andy Pilney and his Notre Dame mates suddenly turned from a flock of prep school players into All-Americans during those dramatic last two minutes.

Greatest One-Man Performance in the Backfield: Jay Berwanger, Chicago's one-man team. He beat Ohio State almost single-handed for one half but had to surrender to an irresistible force. He fought every minute.

Greatest Performance of Single Lineman: Paul Tangora, Northwestern's left guard, against Notre Dame. Paul was the difference between defeat and long-sought victory, breaking the Irish line to shreds, recovering a fumble that led to the winning score and leading the interference for the precious touchdown.

Most Impressive Debut:—Minnesota will never forget "Tiffy" Thompson's debut. Minnesota's great record was falling before Northwestern's great attack, "Tuffy" bounced from the Gopher bench and turned defeat into victory with astonishing runs.

Most Marked Man: Oze Simmons, Iowa's fleet Negro, had everything but a squad of detectives on his heels. One team offered a sweater to the first man to tackle him. Yet Oze was so good his greatness couldn't be denied.

Worst Break: Notre Dame got that when Don Elser was called back from his touchdown dash against Northwestern and Notre Dame penalized 15 yards for holding.

Biggest Score: Ohio State 85, Drake 7.

Worst Lickings in a Row: Michigan, defeated 40 to 0 by Minnesota, and 38 to 0 by Ohio State.

Best Team: You can argue that one.

Devitt Coach Off For Game Parley

G. W. High Is Considered For Richmond Tilt.

The possibility of a school in the Washington area meeting the Richmond high school football champions or the Virginia Prep School champions in Richmond Stadium, Saturday, December 7, was increased yesterday with both Devitt Prep and George Washington High of Alexandria making announcements concerning invitations extended them.

George Washington was informed it was being seriously considered to get the bid, with the result likely to hinge on the result of its game wih Washington-Lee High, at Baggetts Stadium, Thanksgiving Day.

McNamera was told by Ross that Fork Union Military Academy bound for the prep school title of Virginia, may be the team to play instead of Thomas Jefferson High, Richmond public school champs. Forks Union will meet Staunton Military this week.

Opening Mat Program Postponed One Week

The wrestling show, featured by a match between Chief Little Wolf and Jack Donovan, scheduled for tomorrow night, has been postponed one week. Postponement was made necessary because the new Joe Turner Arena at Fourteenth and W streets northwest, will not be quite ready in time.

The new site is practically ready, but work of installing heating units in the lobby has been delayed. The card will be held intact for the date one week from tomorrow and the arena will be christened by the boxing card, starring Phil Furr and Sid Silas, next Monday night.

V. M. I. Practices Against 'Techmen'

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 26.—The V. M. I. Cadets got a good look at Virginia Tech plays today with the first-year squad enacting Gobbler roles in a dummy scrimmage against the varsity.

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—Virginia Tech completed both offensive and defensive drills today for the V. M. I. Thanksgiving Clash. The squad will be put through a short limbering up session tomorrow.

Pitted against the junior varsity in a drill against laterals, the varsity experienced some trouble at first, but later mastered an attack which broke up the passes.

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—William and Mary's Indians held a long workout today, using plays which will be called against Richmond on Thursday.

Otis Bunch returned to the squad and tossed passes with the accuracy he showed before being injured early in the season.

Light Selling Predicted for Tax Purposes

New York, Nov. 26.—Last year's selling of stocks for income tax purposes is believed to have been smaller than in previous years, mainly because of the limitation to $2,000 of the excess of capital losses over capital gains that could be deducted from ordinary incomes of individuals. For the same reason, this year's selling will probably be relatively light, although there may be a moderate increase in liquidation to establish profits by corporations and personal holding companies, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today.

The percentage of gain or loss recognized for an income taxpayer other than a corporation depends upon the length of time the property was held prior to sale, in accordance with the following schedule:

100 per cent—Not more than one year.

80 per cent—More than one, but not more than two years.

60 per cent—More than two, but not more than five years.

40 per cent—More than five, but not more than ten years.

30 per cent—More than ten years.

Because of this provision it is important that the taxpayer take into consideration the length of time an individual security has been held before selling to establish either profit or loss. Where a profit can be shown, it is to his advantage to have held the security as long as possible; where the object is to establish a loss, the briefer period is preferable.

An excess of capital losses over capital gains is deductible from ordinary income only to the extent of $2,000.

Business Failures Continue Decline

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—For four successive weeks business failures in the United States have shown a reduction, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

For the period ended November 21 the number of defaults was 196 compared with 210 in the previous week and 229 in the corresponding week last year.

Lake Ore Shipments Largest in Five Years

Superior, Wis., Nov. 26 (AP).—Ore shipments from superior docks in 1935, totaling 10,332,426 tons, were the largest since 1930, officials of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific docks reported today, an increase of nearly 3,000,000 tons over 1934.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Move Lower in Less Active Trading; Wheat Drops on Peace Talk.

New York, Nov. 26.—Over the range as far as the horizon most Wall Street traders could still make out higher prices, but more of them felt that this was a time for cautious trading, partly because of the recent outburst of bullish predictions from high quarters. Anything of the sort always brings a reaction of anxiety, on the ground that the wish is straining itself to father its thoughts, and that possibly the public may be led to believe that the general situation may not be so sound as it really is, else there would be less need for so much public exhortation.

Whatever the reason, the day was largely given over to pressure on stocks, and bond buying was less active. Stock turnover was around 2,500,000 shares, the smallest in two weeks, which was regarded as a hopeful sign. Prices were at their lowest in the last hour, when losses of 1 to 3 points were numerous. December wheat closed 1¼ cents down at 97⅞ cents a bushel.

Stocks that declined were to be found in all groups. The movement appeared to be a combination of profit taking and short selling sorties, in the hope of uncovering weakness, the whole sprinkled with covering by bears who had turned sour on the market some time ago but who had become uneasy over the apparently strenuously efforts made in high official quarters to whoop things up for a bull market.

Strong Spots.

Radio, White Motors, Bethlehem, Studebaker, Anaconda and Curtiss-Wright were the most active stocks, but they failed to set off a market rally. International Business Machine responded with a gain of more than 2 points to its 3 per cent stock dividend. Twin City Rapid Transit preferred extended its gain of the last week to more than 15 points. Today's advance of 4 points carried the price to the highest in four years. Scott Paper rose half a dozen points. Other strong spots were Crystal Sugar, Arnold Constable, Checker Cab, Lehigh Valley Coal and Parmelee.

In contrast with those stocks, ground was given up easily by some of the recent favorites, including Western Union, Smelters, Auburn, Philip Morris, Chemical, Case, Eastman, Manville, Ingersoll-Rand, Owens Glass and Timken Roller, the group dropping 2 points or more. Some of the rails fell back a point or more. Nickel Plate and Chesapeake were firm. Union Pacific failed to hold an early gain. Aside from Telephone, which equaled its best price in four years, the utilities were softer. Bethlehem was the favorite steel stock, others sliding a little. Most of the oils were lower. Amusements receded, as did rubbers, equipments, mail orders and food. Motor shares were firmer than the accessories.

Francs Turn Steadier.

In foreign exchange the gold currencies were steadier, but the franc was low enough to encourage the engagement of gold for export. The addition of our monetary gold stock over the next fortnight promises to be large, France can lose a great deal more metal without forcing her off the gold standard, provided the movement of capital out of the country does not cause a collapse of confidence at home in the franc.

That is not likely to happen if the Laval government retains its power. So long as the dispute with Italy endures the situation will remain delicate, for the addition to the French budget of war expenditures probably would end the efforts of the French to withstand deflation. Strength in sterling was so pronounced that it was supposed the British equalization fund stepped in to keep down the rise.

Walter E. Frew, chairman of the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co., who has a pleasant custom of circulating at his own expense documents and articles on current affairs which he believes worthy of general attention, has had published in booklet form an address by Thomas M. Steele, president of the First National Bank & Trust Co. of New Haven, before the annual meeting of stockholders of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston earlier this month on the subject of the work of the Federal advisory council, of which Mr. Steele, like Mr. Frew, has been a member.

Advisory Board Criticized.

In the booklet Mr. Steele minced no words on the usefulness of the council and the manner in which that usefulness has been impaired at times by its own cumbersomeness and, more recently, by the attitude the Federal Reserve Board has displayed toward it. Mr. Steele gave some unwritten history in this address which has not received general notice. He left no doubt that the council at all times was within its rights in the sujects it discussed publicly and he feels strongly that the council can be useful in the future "if encouraged to do so—if even permitted to do so."

Government Securities.

That the member banks have embarked upon fresh expansion of their Government securities portfolios, a guess hazarded here a week ago on the basis of four weeks' additions amounting to more than $160,000,000, seems to be demonstrated by a further rise of $38,000,000 in the week ended November 20. Probably much of the rise has been in treasury bill holdings, the chief vehicle through which the Government lately has raised new money. In the week of November 20 the banks liquidated $37,000,000 of other securities and $6,000,000 of Government guaranteed issues. The other principal change in the asset column was a further gain of $46,000,000 in reserves, produced chiefly by gold imports.

Foreign Balances.

Effects of further flow of capital here from abroad are revealed in foreign bank deposits, which gained $13,000,000, and which are now $248,000,000 higher than they were a year ago. Demand deposits rose $99,000,000, time deposits were down $20,000,000 and Government deposits were off $24,000,000. Domestic bank deposits were off $44,000,000. Excess reserves of New York City banks rose from $1,307,000,000 to $1,344,000,000. In other sections of the country there was some reduction in excess funds. Chicago banks' excess reserves dropped from $363,000,000 to $359,000,000.

Call Money.

The effectiveness of the charges made by New York banks to outside banks for service in placing call money in this market is shown by the statements of the banks concerned. Bank of Montreal, for example, reporting for October 31, shows a decline in the year of nearly 50 per cent in funds placed on call in this market. After paying the service charges, at the low rates prevailing, the bank found little profit in such loans.

Calling the Roll.

Important people now on record as predicting an inflationary bull market are:

Straitjacket Ties Railroads, Fletcher Says

General Counsel Asks Less Doctoring, Chance for Initiative.

Reading, Pa., Nov. 26.—Declaring what transportation needs now is less doctoring and more chance to develop along natural lines, R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, speaking here tonight, urged that the railroads be given more freedom from regulation so that they can exercise greater initiative in meeting present-day conditions. Addressing a joint dinner of the Traffic Club and the Chamber of Commerce of Reading, Mr. Fletcher said in part:

"I am pleading for a greater measure of freedom, now that we have all these competing forms of transportation—freedom to employ a greater measure of initiative in meeting conditions of today and those which the future may have in store. Present conditions demand a repeal of the long-and-short-haul clause of the fourth section, a statute which has been so applied as to give an unfair advantage to other forms of transportation not so restricted. If equality is to be the rule, and admittedly no other theory can indefinitely prevail, railroads should not be straitjacketed while the traffic goes to their competitors.

Panama Canal Act.

"The Panama Canal act should be repealed, leaving the railroads free to engage in competitive transportation on the waterways, if that course seems desirable and not prejudicial to the public interest. Clearly, the railroads should be freed from the restrictions imposed by the so-called labor clauses of the emergency transportation act, clauses which have been construed to cover joint arrangements in the interest of economy of the most usual type. Certainly the law should be repealed which prevents the elimination of through routes embracing lines, the inclusion of which is justified by no consideration of economy. In my opinion the rule against discrimination has been pushed entirely beyond its original purpose and to an extent that ignores the most familiar laws of commercial growth.

I. C. C. "Cumbersome."

"I have come, somewhat hesitatingly, I admit, to the view that practice and procedure before the Interstate Commerce Commission are entirely too legalistic and cumbersome. Take for example the litigious procedure which accompanies the action of the commission when a rate change is suspended. I have some serious doubts as to whether the power of suspension should be lodged in the commission. But if mistaken in this tentative view, I see no reason why the parties could not be heard and the question decided in a somewhat summary fashion, without the use of long hearings, tentative reports, exhaustive not to say exhausting briefs and elaborate oral arguments.

"In other words, why can not the question be settled at an informal, business-like conference, pitched upon the understanding that the commission is, in fact, an expert body, informed by experience and capable of acting intelligently without listening to endless harangues."

Mr. Fletcher indorsed the recommendation of the Federal coordinator of transportation that the Interstate Commerce Commission have a permanent chairman appointed by the President with defined administrative and executive authority. He said he believed that this would accomplish good in the way of assuring a continuous consistent policy.

T. C. U., S. M. U. Aerial Battle Forecast

Teams Plan to Fog Air With Passes on Saturday Before 40,000.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, TEX., Nov. 26.—Texas Christian and Southern Methodist universities promise one of the most spectacular football aerial battles of all time when they clash here Saturday.

Five Southwest Conference aerial machines have been grounded in defeat, leaving the untied and unbeaten Methodists and Christians to battle out the championship between themselves. There is a possible Rose Bowl bid for the winner.

These two teams, among the Nation's five major untied and undefeated elevens, plan to fog the air with flying leather before an expected crowd of 40,000.

Begin Polishing Off.

Forwards, laterals, flat zone and basket passes will be on in a sky parade for which both teams began polishing off in workouts today.

Coaches of teams that have been riddled by the Christians and Methodists call it "football suicide" to attempt to match aerial power with either.

Slinging Sammy Baugh, Christian signal caller, and Robert Wilson, Methodist halfback, are the sharpshooters. Both were reported in excellent physical shape for a bombardment at the confeerence championship.

Behind screens of perfect blocking and with swift, alert receivers to pull their passes out of the air, Baugh and Wilson are deliberate, but each gets the ball away amazingly fast. They spot their targets and then practically throw the ball down their throats.

THREE times deserted and forgotten, St. Joseph, Florida, has each time managed to regain life and start again. The town was first established by the French in 1718—and then abandoned a short time later. The Spanish next tried a hand at locating a settlement there, but soon abandoned it. St. Joseph then remained an early American ghost town for more than a century. In 1829 began its greatest development. A building boom starterd, land prices skyrocketed, and by 1836 St. Joseph was a young metropolis with huge docks, warehouses and rail connections.

Two years later business failed, cotton prices fell, yellow fever struck the population, and St. Joseph went into its greatest slump. By 1850 the last resident had deserted the once thriving city, and St. Joseph again became a ghost town. Within the last two or three years a revival of the old town has been started, and it may yet become important as a fishing center.

Basin Park Hotel is built against a mountain side which extends up its entire eight stories. No matter what floor you happen to be on, you can always step out of the door and be on the ground.

Since before the dawn of history all tribes and peoples who till the soil have set aside a time each year to give thanks to their gods for the fall harvest. The ancient Greeks, for example, used to have an annual nine-day festival in honor of Demeter, goddess of grain fields and harvest. The Pilgrims, like most other people in all lands through the ages, celebrated when their harvest—the fruit of their labors during the year—was reaped in the fall.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Rumors — By Harry J. Tuthill

Whoo! What a day. How fast news ankles around town. Every time I turned around somebody grabbed my arm and started telling me..me, mind you, about the pocketbook, and will, and....
George! Shh! Mr. Eldorado is here to see you.
Yes...tremendously disturbed. All the riffraff in town know about the treasure. My own butler told me.
Oh George, I just know...
No sir! Not me!

I'll admit a lot of people started arguments with me about the will and so forth, but... did your butler say who told him...?
George, who cares about that? Go on, Mr...
We should realize how the very word treasure inflames the herd.

I'll say. It makes everybody ga ga. I wish I knew who told your butler that I...
Yes, go on Mr...
My butler heard it in a barber shop. He, too, was shocked. This treasure affair being bandied about by every Tom, Dick, and Harry.

Work Will Start Soon On Winchester Sewers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 26.—More than 3,500 feet of pipe is en route to Winchester for sewer projects to be started soon under the WPA, it was announced today. Mains will be extended on five principal residential streets.

In addition, plans are under way for improvements at the intersection of Kent and Piccadilly streets, crossed by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks, which call for lowering of the steel nearly a foot to conform with the grade of the street. Baltimore & Ohio officials have agreed to the proposal, it was said.

Schoolgirl Drinks Poison After Whipping

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Parsons, W. Va., Nov. 26.—Miss Margaret Dugan, high school student, is recovering from the effects of poison taken after her mother had given her a severe whipping upon her refusal to return from grandmother's home at Hendricks.

Too Many Shirking, Relief Chief Complains

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grafton, W. Va., Nov. 26.—According to W. D. Frey, Taylor County relief administrator, with offices here, "there are too many persons now on direct relief who are making no effort to obtain employment."

Approximately 12 per cent of the relief recipients who are classed as employables are not registered for work. These will be cut from the relief rolls immediately unless the persons register for jobs, the administrator said.

Driver Blames Stagger On Stroke 2 Years Ago

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 26.—R. L. Armor, 63, of Keyser, cigar salesman, relied on the condition of his legs as a defense when arraigned on a charge of driving while drunk, but to no avail. He was fined $51.60 and sentenced to 60 days in jail.

Armor told officers a paralytic stroke two years ago caused him to stagger after his truck collided three times with another machine. The stroke affected his legs, he said.

Hawks Greeted Here as Rogers Mission Ends

Capt. Frank Hawks, famed air speeder and former pilot for Will Rogers, was received by a delegation of Washingtonians interested in the Will Rogers memorial campaign at 2 p. m. yesterday when he ended his national tour in behalf of the drive at the Naval Air Station.

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who is national treasurer of the memorial fund, headed the reception committee.

Capt. Hawks returned a naval plane with which he had toured 25,000 miles and visited 125 cities. He was then rushed with motorcycle escort to studios of WJSV, where he made a talk.

Notables on Hand.

Others who were on hand to greet the flier were Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the District women's section of the campaign organization; George O. Vass, vice president of the Riggs National Bank, who represented Robert V. Fleming, local chairman.

Maj. Henry M. Cunningham, field manager; W. H. Payne, president of the Oklahoma State Society; Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, vice chairman of the women's section for the District, and R. J. Roberts, treasurer of the District drive.

Correspondence released yesterday by the Memorial Extension Commission explained the attitude of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission toward monuments.

Rickenbacker Replies.

Eddie Rickenbacker, director of the operations committee, in reply to a protest from the Memorial Extension Commission against statements that, under no circumstances would the Will Rogers Commission favor a memorial monument wrote:

"Nothing is further from the thoughts of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission than adverse criticism of the monuments that mark the last resting place of our people and which commemorate the deeds of our great men."

Rickenbacker explained that the commission felt, however, that the contributors would not want the whole amount put into a monument.

Gen. Knight Named Aid to Staff Chief

Succeeds Gen. Moses, Now on Special Duty.

Brig. Gen. Harry E. Knight, head of the military intelligence division of the War Department general staff, has been named assistant chief of staff in charge of the personnel division, it was stated by military authorities yesterday.

In his new asignment Gen. Knight succeeds Brig. Gen. Andrew Moses, whose tour of duty has expired. Gen. Moses will be attached to the office of the chief of staff for special duty.

Col. Francis H. Lincoln will become the new head of the military intelligence division, succeeding Gen. Knight.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

IN the absence of an executive order from the White House, departmental and agency chiefs are without authority to grant a half holiday today on Thanksgiving eve, as has been the custom in former years.

BAKER.

This was learned yesterday afternoon at the Treasury, where such orders generally are received first.

However, thousands of employes are planning to enjoy four days of vacation at the expense of one and a half days' annual leave, taking Friday and Saturday off. Those planning to make trips home or to nearby places point out that they will have five nights out of Washington.

Some of the employe leaders hold that the curtailment of the half-day holiday preceding this Thanksgiving is a prelude to the economy wave reported gaining momentum to break in the next session of Congress.

Musician to Retire.

Arthur S. Whitcomb (F), second leader of the Marine Band and a cornet soloist, will be retired from the Marine Corps December 1. Mr. Whitcomb joined the Marine Band in 1905 and, except for a short term with the United States Cavalry Band, has been with the Marines continuously. He was born in England 56 years ago. He served at one time with the famous Coldstream Guards of that country. Mr. Whitcomb is retiring at his own request.

Mrs. Roberta H. Fielding (C), Federal Bureau of Investigation, has returned to work after an illness of several weeks.

Commerce Press Room.

The press room at Commerce Department has suddenly become a beehive of activity. Correspondents crowd the quarters, waiting for releases on shipments of materials to Italy and Ethiopia and translating the releases into dispatches in light of the tense European situation.

Beautiful Words.

From Congress we have had naught
This year for which to give thanks;
Some think we were put on the spot,
And claim we drew nothing but blanks.

Allow me to say, friends, right here—
In praise which contains no alloy—
Their promises filled me with cheer,
So I'm thankful at least for that joy.

W. D. ROMESTER (C), Commerce.

Youth Administration Objectives.

Q.—What are the purposes of the National Youth Administration?—H. A. Bentley (C).

A.—This question was answered in the Federal Diary October 29, but since the establishment of this agency its objectives have been modified and extended. The major objectives of the National Youth Administration, as set forth in its information primer, are sixfold:

1. To provide part-time employment on WPA projects for persons between 16 and 25, from relief families.

2. To stimulate development of socially desirable projects and enterprises designed to benefit youth generally.

3. To provide funds for part-time employment of needy college and graduate students.

4. To provide funds for part-time employment of needy school students chiefly from relief families.

5. To encourage job counseling, training and placment services for young people.

6. To encourage extension of constructive educational and job-qualifying leisure-time activities.

The National Youth Administration was established by the President by Executive order June 26, 1935, and made a division of the WPA through the authority of the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935. Aubrey Williams is executive director and Richard E. Brown, assistant executive director. The national headquarters is located at 1340 G street northwest.

Italians Apologize For Padua Incident

Menacing of U. S. Women May Be Further Protested.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 26.—The American Embassy announced today that Italians have made two apologies to the wives of two American physicians who were surrounded by Fascist students and menaced at Padua recently.

Despite this fact, the embassy added, it may make representations to the Italian government.

The Americans, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Moersch and Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Bollman, of the Mayo Institute, Rochester, Minn., said American flags were torn from their automobile, which carried a British license plate.

The embassy said the Padua prefect offered an apology to the American consul sent there to investigate. Students who participated apologized through an interpreter when ordered to do so, the announcement said.

She declines to reveal the name of the bridegroom-to-be.
